Love is the Currency of the 21st Century

Love is the Currency of the 21st Century

Origins of Slavery, aka Commerce

In the Garden of Eden, the serpent suggested to Eve, that if she were to eat of the fruit of the tree of knowledge of good and evil, her eyes would be opened and she would be as God. So, she and Adam ate the Amanita Muscaria mushroom (which resembles an apple) ... a hallucinogen which allowed them to realize that they are, indeed, God— just as the serpent had said. It also allowed them to see that their nakedness meant that they are slaves, since, in the Garden, slaves wore no clothing. When they realized that their true nature was God, they clothed themselves accordingly. The LORD God (ego mind) didn't like the fact that his slaves now knew they were God/Divinity, so he threw them out. Now, they were responsible for finding their own food, clothing, and shelter. Certainly, they had been protected, in the Garden, (read: "received benefits and privileges"), but their true freedom meant that they were now completely responsible for their lives. This was probably not too worrisome for them, now, with their gained knowledge that they are God.

In the 8th book of The Ringing Cedars of Russia series, we read that the slave-owners realized that, one day, the slaves, who out-numbered the masters 10 to 1, would finally catch onto how to escape, one way or another. So, the masters "freed" them by offering the slaves coins. The slaves were now free to clothe, feed, and house themselves, in any way they chose. The added bonus was that the more they worked, the more coins they received, the better food, clothing, and housing they could acquire .... but, they were still slaves, only now they were slaves to the coins.

Mankind, in his fear for his survival, has always wanted to control his environment and other people. So, mankind has never known anything but slavery. People who insist that the commercial system was designed to work for everyone—if only the public servants would do their jobs and, if only there weren't so much greed—are just being naive. Nothing is going to change the system of slavery. We cannot change anything outside ourselves without first changing our minds about what we think is outside ourselves. We must do as the original slaves (Adam and Eve), did ... realize that we are God, get up the gumption, and leave the Garden.

One slave might be smart enough to find a hole in the fence and probably escape the Garden, yet, he dare not come back and tell the others how he did so. Even if he did, the hole would already have been fixed. But, inevitably, another slave has an even more clever idea about how to get out, so he gathers all the other slaves and, for a fee, tells them how to get out. Why don't the other slaves ask, "If you've found an escape, why are you still here?... talking about how to get out? ..... not because you care about us, or you wouldn't be charging us."

Many slaves have "found" legal material which the slave-owners have deliberately left lying about so that the slaves will give their attention to that, rather than to remembering they are God and able to escape. They don't want a repeat of Adam and Eve, so they keep them busy with other distractions: sports, shopping, school, TV, and expensive seminars on "how to escape".

But there is no escape as long as the slaves are resisting slavery. They are putting all their energy into not being a slave and this only affirms that they are, indeed, slaves. We become what we most resist. This is all part of the big plan to keep the slaves in their heads, as opposed to affording them the time and peace of mind to look into their hearts and remember who they are. If they did, just as Adam and Eve did, they would cover their nakedness, i.e.: clothe themselves in the "frequency of love". Slaves who have attained this high frequency are the most dangerous slaves to have around because they can awaken the other slaves.

The "seminar" slaves are not a threat to the slave-owner because these slaves are being kept busy looking for the solution outside themselves. The real threat is slaves who have risen above the level of being controlled. They even appear different which will get the attention of the others. The slave-master must expel them, just as the LORD God did with Adam and Eve. For most, being outside the garden is a daunting prospect, but for those who have realized the frequency of love, the thought of expulsion is freeing. They trust their intuition and know they will be safe.

There is no way of escape, as long as the slaves focus on papers that the slave-owner deliberately left for them to find and study. The way out is to remember who we are. See paragraph one.

Imagine kids playing Monopoly, on the living-room floor, in the evening. Dad walks by and says, "Wrap it up, kids. Bedtime!" The kids beg Dad to play with them. Dad knows that if he joins them in the game, he will become one of them, and the kids will manage, surreptitiously, to keep him in the game and bedtime will be a long way off. The instant Dad sits down and asks, "What are the rules of the game", the kids know they have won, because he is now IN the game. But, Dad knows who he is and says, "I'm not playing; I don't care what the rules read, or even if you are following the rules; you do what I say." There is nothing the kids can say or do, now that Dad refuses to give them his attention, energy, time, or emotion which they required, in order to continue to play.

In several of the "checkpoint" videos, where Border Patrol stops people, I notice that those who do not cave, are ultimately told, "Our superiors feel that, uh, we got better things to do than to play this game with you, sir, so we've been ordered to allow you to depart the checkpoint." What they are really saying is, "We were told to say, 'we have to let you go, if we cannot get you to play our game with us ..... sir'." When we stop consenting to play, the game will end. Got it?

"Business" is None of My Business

Hence, I neither know nor care how the banks, government, corporations, institutions play the game of commerce. I do know that complication indicates the presence of lies because only Truth is simple. Knowing the details of their game would not benefit me.... it is their game. I do know that their accounting system requires NOTHING from me. I have more important things on which to put my time, attention, energy, and emotion. I am doing all I can to ascend to the frequency of love so that I can escape their slavery.

So, what I did to handle their desire to involve me was to tell them that I neither know nor care about how they play their game. Public servants have only 3 things to do at their places of employment: 1. provide me their goods and services; 2. manage the accounting thereof, which without the commerce game, wouldn't be necessary, but, it is up to them to do what they do, to balance their books. This is their business, not mine. 3. Cash Confiscation. They must do their job, i.e.: get cash from me, or they will not get paid. (See paragraph two.) So, they threaten me with "disconnection of service" if I do not "pay". This is extortion and fraud. Handing over our cash or not has nothing to do with the balancing of their books and ledgers.

Their books were balanced long before we ever received anything from them. In the case of an alleged "bank loan", no bank would ever hand us thousands of dollars without our first having paid them. Banks are in the business of "profit", so it is an impossibility that they would trust the slaves to take thousands from them, if they didn't get it from us, first. So, they do, in the form of a note with a signature. The amount on the note matches, exactly, the amount on the cheque we receive. What does this tell you? It was strictly an exchange of paper. No one gained; no one lost... a perfect example of "equal consideration" which is the prime requirement of all contracts.

At the end of the day, all bank records must prove zero balance. The next morning, nothing could be outstanding or there would be serious grounds for an audit. So, when you get an alleged "loan", ask the banker, "Will your books balance, at the end of today?" Of course! "So, where, on your books, could what you call my "indebtedness to the bank", possibly show up?"

Years later, they say you signed papers which indicate your agreement to fork over your cash for the next 30 years. But that contract was based upon fraud, so not only is the contract invalid but also, since there is no statute of limitations on fraud, the mortgager now owes you the amount you have already paid. Tell the trustee of the public trust to write a cheque to the Name and deposit it. We (trust grantors) tell public servants what to do, but, not how to do it. If they require our authorization in order to credit the public trust, via the Name, then, we can let them know we authorize the paper which allows them to do so, but nothing more.

We know that all public accounting is handled by the exchange of paper and digital entries into a computer. That is all there is. Neither money nor cash is required; only paper and digital credit and debit. However, the insidious, prime purpose of this entire game is "Cash Confiscation". They pretend they are here to serves us, but, their true purpose is cash confiscation.

Here is how they do it: They create a "charge"/debt, for a utility, traffic infraction, or IRS/CRA; it matters not—as long as there is an "amount owing". They make it up, as it cannot be real. They simply need a reason to charge the public trust and they require a Name, through which to access that credit. Remember, the entire game is about nothing other than "cash confiscation".

Through years of programming, we have come to believe that we are a Name. We are not. LORD God—the ego mind—named Adam who then named everything in the garden. Only slaves are named. We couldn't possibly be a Name, when we already know that we are God. The Name is simply a registered corporation, through which the public can access the public trust. What for? For "cash confiscation". Why? When people have less cash, they are more easily frightened, compliant, manipulated, and controlled—just the way slave-owners want their slaves. This is the only reason for Cash Confiscation.... other than the controllers of the world are buying their way into the underground facilities at Denver airport because they live in fear of some catastrophe. But that's not important, right now.

Regain Control

We have dominion over them, until we sink to their level which we do by communicating with them, in any way. Then, we are in their frequency. They control the lower frequencies of anger, frustration, and fear. When we regard this from an energetic perspective (and energy is all there is), we see that we must not engage in their insanity. When we do anything at that frequency, we are vulnerable to their control.

The only solution is to remove, from them, our attention, time, energy, and emotion and direct it to the frequency of love. They cannot exist in "love", yet, we can stoop to anger, frustration, and fear. As they desperately require these emotions from us in order to survive, their full-time job is to devise the means to capture them.

When we look to them for our "remedy" for anything, we are enslaved. This is why they keep us looking "outside ourselves" for answers to everything ... love, money, happiness, peace, health. The solution to all of that is within us, not them. They love it when we get upset over their signing bills to "take away our health freedoms". Cry me a river. We are above all that.

Every aspect of this game of commerce is a red herring ..... just varying forms of manipulation designed to keep our attention off our Divinity. All "laws" (codes, rules, regulations, statutes, acts, legislations, bills, by-laws, constitutions) apply only to those who legislated them. Therefore, the "remedies" within said "laws", also, apply only to those who legislated them.

So, whereas they must follow their own "commercial laws", so then, they have the opportunity to access their "commercial remedies", available within them. Whereas we have NO obligation to follow their commercial laws, so then, we also have NO opportunity to access their commercial remedies within them. So, put away all your thoughts of finding a "solution FOR commerce IN commerce" because, although there are many "solutions" and "remedies", by which a few of us have prevailed, albeit very briefly over the years, these alleged "solutions" and "remedies" were designed by the privileged, to be used by the privileged, ... NOT to be used by the slaves whom they consider us to be. When they realize that it is a slave who has implemented one of their "commercial remedies", they simply put a stop to it.

All of the "latest processes", are 'psy-ops processes'; they are disinformation which comes from the controllers, themselves, in order to distract our attention from the true cause...which is we, and the true solution...which is to clear our minds of the programmed belief that there is an authority outside ourselves. NO solution FOR commerce can be found IN commerce because commerce is of the ego mind and WE are not. Our solution lies within. Our solution is our dominion. They do not care WHAT we believe, as long as our beliefs are what THEY promoted because it is the "believing", itself, ..... the energy, time, emotion, and attention we give them, which allows them to realize their control over us. If we do as they tell us, no matter what that is—whether their rules or their words, we remain under their control.

The controllers believe and obey LORD God, of the Bible, which is their law book because their superiors have sworn upon it. So, we can point to it and declare our Dominion. If they do not accept the Bible, then they have relinquished their option to refer to any of their "laws" which would establish their "authority" over us, because all their laws are derived from LORD God's laws. They're sunk, either way, as long as we remember who we are ..... Divinity with Dominion.

I know of no "commercial remedy" or "process" which has consistently worked. Episodic wins are granted only to keep us on the idiotic treadmill of "search for the cure". I do know, though, of a few who have prevailed, over time, by having declared their dominion over all the earth and over every living thing upon the earth.

Names

In truth, nothing has a name. We do our children a huge disservice by telling them the names of things because this takes them directly into their left brains—the intellect— where the controllers of the world want us. They do not want us in our right brains—the creative, spiritual mind, with access to our Divinity. The "substance" (consciousness/energy) of man already existed and LORD God (ego) captured that and breathed into it "form", creating the concept of duality—substance/spirit and form/ego, and named it Adam. Adam then named everything in the "world". LORD God (ego) has jurisdiction over NAMES/forms/fictions.... and nothing else.

Everything in fiction (forms) .... is of LORD God. This means that we, as God, are unable to recognize it. The minute we do, we step into LORD God's “form”/fiction/image and leave behind our God-like “substance” and status. If we acknowledge them, other than to order them, as public servants, what to do, we are trapped. The instant we file documents, complete forms, mail legal paper, follow commercial processes, etc. we give up our Divinity, step into their fiction, and behave as if they have authority over us because, at that point, they do.

Example: it is alright for man, created as female, by God, to grow and smoke a plant which we/God created. We have “dominion over all the earth and over every living thing upon the earth”. Since legalities apply to NAMES, it is illegal for MARY to grow and smoke MARIJUANA. As long as we do not identify anything, by NAME—the means by which LORD God gained control, then we remain free from the jurisdiction of LORD God/controllers (cops, bankers, judges, et al). The God of the controllers is LORD God, the ego mind. We/God are Divinity. Spirit mind (God) can control ego mind (Lord God). This means that love (spirit mind) is more powerful than fear and control (ego mind). Now, read again, my article on Ho’oponopono.

The Name is not you, nor is it yours. You couldn’t possibly be a ‘name’. You were not invited to court; the Name was. They have charged the Name, not you. The charging of the public trust is their business, not yours. If they charge, they are obliged to offset. You don’t care how they do it; it has nothing to do with you. You have dominion (rule) over all the earth and over every living thing upon the earth and that includes things made from the earth, e.g.: court documents. They are following the laws of LORD God (ego mind) and you are God/Divinity (spirit mind). You can function at the frequency of love and they cannot. They will not even be able to detect you, because they cannot recognize love. Love is a frequency which they cannot attain, cannot reach, cannot see, cannot be. This is our edge. We have a power which not only can they not handle, have no weapons against, but also they have no experience of it. It is completely out of their realm. “Love” is your tool; USE IT!

The bureaucrats who charged the public trust, did so via the Name and so they must re-pay their debt to the public trust, via the same Name. We know that anything they have us sign or return to them is the paper (voucher, ticket, etc.) which they can use to deposit to the public trust. It’s true that they would prefer we identify with the Name and when they convince us that the Name owes, they hope that we will simply believe that we owe. Then they get to confiscate our cash, but cash never can or will offset a debt derived from a piece of paper. It is oil and water. They do not mix and they are not interchangeable. The only way for them to offset the debt which they created by charging the public trust, via the Name, is to deposit another piece of paper into the public trust, via the Name.

I always tell them that the easiest way for them to zero balance their ledgers and the accounting of the public trust would be to write a cheque to the Name, thereby debiting their account the same amount that they have already credited it (via the charging (debiting) of the public trust), ..... and they can mail the cheque to the above-listed address (mine).

All debt is created on pieces of paper; therefore, all debt can be offset by other pieces of paper.

The very first time I was in court, 14 years ago, I said, "That's not my name." I was in handcuffs before I could take my next breath. What does this tell you? I hit them where it hurt. That I didn't know how to handle the situation, after I made that remark, is unfortunate, but never doubt that the "name game" is the crux of the entire matter.

The ego thinks its purpose is our "survival". When we feel threatened, our ego kicks in and the results are, inevitably, insane. If we can grasp that "survival" is not our responsibility, we can keep the ego at bay, and trust that "whatever is ... is, or is at least good enough". Letting go of our attachments to outcomes and accepting results is the key. Our survival is the responsibility of our higher self/oversoul/spirit. So, the ego's desire to "win the commerce game" is a waste of time and energy, not only because it cannot be done but also because even if it could, the win would produce no tangible or lasting results within any reality, since we are living within an illusion. It is tantamount to identifying oneself as the "winner" of a Monopoly game because the instant the game is over, the "win" ceases to matter. It is all part of the dream/fiction and, as ACIM says, "You forgot to laugh."

Love is the Currency of the 21st Century

Yes, there will be an end of the economic system, along with everything else we know, because we are the ones who will end it. We are fed up with the insanity of the way it is. Everything will shift, very soon; as soon as we shift. Commerce will end, when we quit playing the game.

We will all soon be doing what we love to do and serving our fellow man by doing so. When we operate from love and we give, we get back way more than we gave. Not only I but also my friend, Nick, among many others, has proved this.

My friend, Nick, is a pilot and flight instructor. He also works on computers and upgrades everyone he can to Linux. He has been serving his fellow man, in various ways, and operating from love, for over 4 years without trading, exchanging, or receiving a paycheque. At the end of every week, somehow, he has enough cash or gifts to take care of his family of six. He operates purely on donation and his intuition. Sometimes he receives nothing, sometimes he receives a little, and sometimes he receives a lot. He relies upon his higher self /intuition /oversoul to tell him what to do, where to go, how to be. He knows that he and his family will be taken care of and all that he has is precisely what he requires – no more and no less. At the end of his day, it is always enough. Nick does not charge his fellow man, he has faith in his intuition, and he claims he has never been happier. Being a former, very-devoted, evangelical, born-again, spirit-filled Christian, this was quite a change, for the better. For those who wonder, “compared to what?”, I have pictures of Nick with his Cadillac, one of his many motor homes, his aeroplane, and his huge house with a huge yard. After studying law, scripture, and history he realized that all the problems on earth come from everyone competing against each other and, one day, said to his wife, “I just can’t do this anymore; I am part of the problem.” So, he walked away from it all. He says he has not a care in the world, any longer. “Everything is handled. I just have to do my part everyday and that is all. Life has never been better.”

“You are an aspect of the infinite so, to that which you imagine to be real, you actually give life. So the idea of what you might call ‘negative entities’ – ‘they’ can have lives of their own; ‘they’ can have an existence and self-awareness, but the only way you can interact with any negative consciousness is by being of that frequency and attracting it. One of the easiest ways to be of that frequency and to attract it is to fall for the idea that you have to fear it because you really believe that it is more powerful than you are. It isn't; ... it would like you to think so because that's what generates the fear it needs to survive. But, you are not less powerful. Whatever you choose is what you are and whatever you are is what you attract and, if you know you choose to be a reflection of the positive manifestation, then you might be able to be aware of the fact that there might be negative manifestations, but they can never interact with you in any effectual way. You will become literally invisible to them." -- Bashar

The "world" is only a projection of what goes on in our minds, so, those whom we call "controllers of the world" are really only "controllers of our minds". The only reason they are "controllers of our minds" is because WE ARE NOT. The instant we take control of our minds, our world will become the way WE want it and it will immediately cease to be the way 'they' want it.

The work that is exigent is to take control of our minds .... not of the world, not of others, not of our circumstances, not of anything; only of that which goes on in our minds. Turn away from the world; turn away from everything; turn away from everyone, and turn to yourself. The purpose of life is "mind management".

The only thing going on 'in the world' is that which I am perceiving and, in order to perceive it, I had to imagine it, first. I am the creator of all that I experience.

We do not see things as they are; we see them as WE are. -- Anais Nin

**The Authority Hoax – Recalling Our Power**

Published by admin under Knowing Who You Are

Ho'oponopono is an ancient Hawaiian art by which we discover that we are 100% responsible for every experience of our lives. Through self-identity, the four phrases of Ho'oponopono allow us to be responsible for all our thoughts, feelings, behaviour, problems, relationships, actions and reactions, circumstances, and even the opportunities which come our way. By taking 100% responsibility we can erase programming, data, memories, and beliefs, in order to get closer to Zero. By "cleaning on" our subconscious, we can become clear to receive inspiration from Divinity. With inspiration, we can recall the power we were meant to have.

Worry about, judgement of, or engagement in a problem reveals to Divinity that we do not require its assistance. We do have "free will" to do so, however, what we resist will persist until we let go of it and allow Divinity to erase it from our memory. The phrases which energetically allow for this are: "I love you; I'm sorry; Please forgive me; Thank you." Dr. Hew Len worked as a psychotherapist at Hawaii State Hospital for the criminally insane and never met with any patients, in session. He knew that his seeing them as insane was due to his memory and data, so he worked with this concept, not with the patients. After two years, all but two patients had left the hospital and it was closed.

We are constantly living in our memories. We can never experience anything as 'new' and our ability to "Be Here Now" is prevented. What if we had no emotional memory? We could then see everything, clearly, as Here and Now. Ho'oponopono allows the Divinity within us to erase the memories which are causing us to react to all information, persons, and situations.

It is important not to have expectations of outcomes. We know this, yet, it is difficult to avoid. I recall when I ate only alkaline food for a couple of weeks. Certain aspects of my body, which I never would have imagined would heal, did heal; and others, which I had hoped would heal, did not. So, this is all up to Divinity to erase those memories as it deems to be in the best interest of us all ... as the one.

Every problem we encounter is an opportunity to 'clean on it'. If the problem appears to be someone else's, it is up to us to clean on it because, in the here and now, WE are experiencing it; therefore, it is ours to heal. "If you spot it, you got it."

Ho'oponopono allows us to be at peace. Whatever or whoever is disturbing us is only due to our perceiving it ... or them, based upon a memory. It might be due to data which we both share, and this is possible if we have a previous experience with them. This is usually the case because we have lifetimes upon lifetimes with those who appear to be unknown to us now. The finale is: we just don't know anything so the solution is to repeat the phrases and trust that Divinity will erase the programs, data, memory, fear, belief, and trauma and we will be free. Trying to "figure it out" (why am I ill? ... why don't I like that fellow? ... why did I create this situation?) is only a waste of time and energy because not only can we never know, but also "knowing" will not assist our spiritual evolution. "Why" doesn't matter; so, asking "why?" only placates the ego-mind and this is how it maintains its vice-grip control of us.

Everything but "peace" is a memory! This means that all 'negative' thoughts, annoying circumstances, disease, our reaction to people, and everything, other than peace of mind, is a memory. It is not real in the here and now. The conscious mind is capable of processing only 15 bits of the 11 million bits of information we perceive subconsciously, every second. It is idiocy to think that we know what is going on in the world. We couldn't possibly know what is going on with anything or anyone, anywhere, any time, ever. We are clueless! Fifteen bits, of the 11 million which impact any given circumstance, are hardly enough information upon which to make any sort of wise discernment or take any sort of appropriate action. We are missing the bulk of the information to do so. Better to leave this in the hands of Divinity and one way is to repeat the phrases which invite that power to do so.

Ho'oponopono teaches that we have three levels to the mind. Memories release from conscious to subconscious to super-conscious to Divinity which erases them from the world. Our usual waking state is in memory and so, we are deaf to Divinity's inspiration. By taking 100% responsibility and "cleaning on" everything, all the time, we release memories, open to inspiration, and ultimately reach Zero state where we feel peace. We then become an empty vessel for Divinity to provide us all that we require.

Not only do we not know anything but also we have no need to know anything. The desire for information and knowledge is our conscious mind/ego's desire to remain in control. But, that's impossible because it cannot process the vast amount of information with which we are presented every second. It is lose/lose, so our intent to learn as much as we can about any given situation is laughable. I am reminded of when my mid-wife asked me, "So, are you ready to have this baby?", who was due in two days, and I answered, "I just wish I had time to read one more book on the subject." She sternly looked me in the eye and said, "YOU need to have read one LESS book." She knew that I was an information junkie, I over-analyzed everything, and I had a belief that if I knew, intellectually, everything there was to know about bearing my baby, I would be a ripping success when, in fact, I noticed, as I was in labour and delivery, that my intellect and vast knowledge had absolutely nothing to do with my experience. The entire event was a success, due to my intuition, not my information.

For those of you who are searching for a solution to our commercial woes, my intent is that you realize that doing so is an attempt to correct the system – that which lies outside ourselves. It is not only impossible but also a ludicrous concept, now that we know that there is nothing 'out there'. There is no 'world' out there. It is all within each of us and what we see is a mirror image of what we bring to any waking moment. There is only we, facing our memories. Those whom we meet in commercial situations – cops, judges, bankers, et al – are only there for us to realize that we must clean on our memory, traumas, beliefs – whether from 'another time and space' or just last week. Bumping into those whom we deem 'thugs' is only our opportunity to clean on it so that it does not occur again. Blaming them only further empowers them and disempowers us.

The world is not being done TO you; the world is being done BY you. The world is not coming AT you; it is coming FROM you. When you go to a position of being "at cause" instead of being "at effect", then you are no longer a victim. – Gary Renard

I wish I could tell you that the degree of our desire could impact our success; alas, I cannot. This ought not to keep us from doing it though because it is the ONLY way to put an end to all this nonsense that we have all experienced. There is no other solution. There is no solution IN commerce FOR commerce; it is all within US and the instant we accept 100% responsibility for our experiences, it will all come to a screeching halt... whenever that is meant to be. It is determined by Divinity, not us, and although we are a duplication of divinity, it is not our business. As long as we pour our time and energy into something which is outside ourselves, we are pouring them down the drain. The solution is within ourselves and no amount of knowledge, processes, information, remedies, etc. can relieve us of the horrors which we have all suffered, by our own memories. We must quit listening to others, reading, learning, or studying commercial "solutions". Only we can clear this up for ourselves and when we do, it will be cleared for us all. Remember, Dr. Hew Len cleaned only on himself: "What is it in me that causes me to experience these people as insane?" He worked only on his memories and, within months, these "criminally insane" people were no longer so. Can't we do the same to stop the viciousness which is solely our own lifetimes of memories? Of course we can. We can no longer spend our time and energy on looking outside ourselves for a solution to what appears to be the problems "in the world". The "world situation" is not "in the world"; it is in our memories and only we can clean on those memories and only Divinity can erase them so that we are no longer at the effect of them.

"When we clear our personal stuff, we can go cosmic." – Barbara Marciniak

What appears to be going on in the world is none of our business because it is only 'details'. We already know how insane the 'world' is, so the details are immaterial. We have enough going on within ourselves to keep us busy. But, notice that the propaganda is designed to keep our attention on healing the mirror image (world) and away from healing ourselves. We have no idea what is going on in the world. We must quit pretending that we do. Information and knowledge are red herrings. It is the global elitists' way of saying, "Look over here, at the image, so that you will not look to the source. Ignore the man behind the curtain – the cause – because the cause is we and as soon as we recall our power, it is we who can change that which appears to be 'in the world'.

The elitists want us searching for palliatives for what is in the mirror; they do not want us to heal the cause. We can heal the cause by asking Divinity to erase our memories, in order to effect a cure for what is going on because, since "Peace Begins with Me", we would then have 100% control over what is going on in the mirror/world. As long as we continue to look where they point, to see how bad it all is, we remain powerless. This is how they want us ... out of control and powerless. If we take 100% responsibility for ALL of it, we recall our power and have the energy to shift the entire situation, via shifting the projector – the mind. That which appears to be going on in the world is really only a result of what is going on in the mind. The only place our attention ought to be is on us and 'cleaning on' those memories which are preventing us from experiencing peace. There is no authority outside of us. We are the authority – both the cause and the cure. There is no one and nothing else.

We are meant to act, immediately, upon inspiration. If we are confused about what we 'hear', we are to clean on it. We must stop giving our memories our power. They are what keeps us from living our lives. Everything in our lives which pains us is always, only a result of our memory. When we clean on our memories and Divinity erases them, they are gone from the world because we are the source of all the problems which appear to be in the world.

There are hundreds of billions of info-bits which we subconsciously perceive every day and we react to them via our memories. Based upon these memories, which we couldn't possibly begin to discover, we have developed beliefs. 'Good' beliefs are as detrimental as 'bad' beliefs, as they are all based upon only memories, not upon any facts because there are no "facts"; there are only experiences. We have beliefs about God, other people, events, health, wealth, love, and life itself. It is never-ending and it is ALL the past. E.g.: think about how many times eggs, have gained and lost status: "good food - bad food". Only our personal experiences of anything, is important. But, those experiences are all influenced by memory, opinions, propaganda, facts, science, history, etc. There is only here and now.

Peace Begins With Me

If there is to be peace on earth; it must begin with each one of us, individually. There is nothing to do, out there. Nothing out there can be “corrected” without first correcting our memories, beliefs, programming, knowledge, data, judgements, information, “truths”, opinions, etc. which is ALL garbage. “The Information Era” was a huge boon, but it has back-fired on us in that we now ‘know’ too much. This has titillated our left brain to grasp at greater amounts of data – the very thing we want to erase. We have no need of what we think is “important information” because we do not have the capacity to assimilate it.

Once you decide to titillate instead of illuminate . . . you create a climate of expectation that requires a higher and higher level of intensity. – Bill Moyers.

Dr. Hew Len says that when we are willing to take 100% responsibility for whatever we experience in our life, we can then go on to the next step where we say, “I am sorry for bringing, to this situation, whatever is going on in me, that I experience the world this way. Please forgive me for whatever it is that caused this”. Once we ‘let go’, the Divine can shift the energy and this will impact the entire cosmos.

We never experience life’s events accurately; we experience only our reaction to them. When we meet people, we do not experience them the way the Divine created them, so we ought to be thinking, “I am sorry for what ever is going on in me that I do not experience him the way Divinity created him; please forgive me”. If we want to rid the problems of others, we must rid our own, first. Our memories dictate our experiences and, ergo, our experiences are inauthentic. When we do not take responsibility for our experiences, not only do we miss the here and now but also we resort to blaming others for any ‘bad’ experiences. When conscious and unconscious memories are erased, they stop dictating our reactions.

The most important questions of creation are, “Who am I?” and “Who’s in Charge?” We must “know thyself”. When we know that we are Divinity, we are capable of taking 100% responsibility and this grants us the power to experience authentically. The whole world is within us and, by being 100% responsible, (saying “I love you; I’m sorry; please forgive me; thank you”), we regain our power, we change, and the world changes, too.

Unfortunately, for those of us who pride ourselves on our intellect, our intellect does not have the ability to erase memories from our subconscious mind because that is not its function. When we have 11 million bits per second of information coming at us, of which we are conscious of only 15, (Tor Norretranders - The User Illusion), our conscious mind can not make our decisions; it is memories that choose our resultant behaviour. The function of the intellect, according to Dr. Hew Len, is to make the choice between whether we are going to take 100% responsibility for everything we experience in our lives, or not. This is similar to the concept of A Course In Miracles: We are three minds: the ego, the spirit, and the one who chooses to which one to listen. We must learn to chose 'spirit'/Divinity to be the one to dictate our actions and experiences.

David Ike says, "The cliché, "knowledge is power" is not true. Knowledge is not power unless you act on it." I contend that both "knowledge" and "the acting upon it" are what keeps us in the world when our soul's intent is to get us out of it.

Most are seeking more information, hence, the popularity of "the information superhighway", however, I want LESS information. I want to unplug; I want less on my mind. I want to "tune in, turn on, and drop-out".... tune into the frequency of my Divinity, turn on to who I really am: an innocent who has no knowledge of the world, and drop-out of the meaningless barrage of programs, information, beliefs, knowledge, news, data, and memories which only prevent a clear, still, non-judgemental, thought-free, neutral mind. "Zero" – "here and now" – is the only state in which we can receive Divine inspiration.

ACIM (A Course in Miracles) is adamant about this! "I do not know what anything is for; I have given everything I see all the meaning it has for me; I do not understand anything; I am never upset for the reason I think; I see only the past; I see nothing as it is now; My thoughts do not mean anything; My meaningless thoughts are showing me a meaningless world; A meaningless world engenders fear; I have no neutral thoughts; I can escape from the world I see by giving up attack thoughts; God is in everything I see because God is in my mind; I am not a victim of the world I see;

I have invented the world I see; I could see peace instead of this; There is nothing to fear", etc.

Be vigilant, be aware, be disciplined. We are to "clean" before we inflict our preconceived ideas on all people, places, and things. I don't know what is going on or why, but I would like to make amends for them. Yet we cannot correct what appears to be outside ourselves; we can only ask that Divinity erase what we are bringing to the world. We want to be in tune with ourselves and at peace, not in tune with what is "out there". When we are at Zero, we operate in the best interests of us all.

Decades ago, my friend broke up with a fellow called, Ralph. She told me that, now, her life was, ALL about "Ralph and NOT Ralph" .... in other words, even when she was not missing Ralph and her life was about not Ralph, that meant that her life was still about "Ralph". This duality is the entire matter. There is no neutrality in duality or polarity. As ACIM says, "I have no neutral thoughts", so thoughts themselves are the problem. So, the cliché, "think positive" is a hazardous concept. We do not have thoughts; thoughts have us. When we can reach neutrality, which Dr. Hew Len calls, "Zero", we are FREE. In meditation, we strive to get to "no thought". My ego does not want me to meditate because it thrives on my attention and, to the ego, my not paying attention to it means 'death'. It will do anything to hold my attention, keep me thinking its thoughts, and holding its beliefs. It doesn't care whether these beliefs are negative or positive, as long as it has the authority, over me, on what to believe.

The PTB, Global Elite, Illuminati, Government, Vatican, Corporations, etc. represent the ego mind. It does not care whether we believe 'good' beliefs or 'bad' beliefs, as long as we continue to 'believe' and look outside ourselves for 'information' and situations which corroborate those beliefs. That is where it controls us. Which side of the coin we believe is not the issue; the issue is the coin itself. They do not care which religion, nationality, profession, sports team, TV show, doctor, career, opinions, school, etc., we choose, as long as we do choose, regard it as very important to us, and insist upon identifying with it. All that matters is that our identifying beliefs be well-lodged within our psyche. THIS is what grants them control over us. Neither the ego nor the PTB cares what we believe as long as we have beliefs .... to hold energetic space – space which is meant to be kept clear to receive Divine inspiration. Neither the ego mind nor the PTB wants us clear because both want to remain in control of us so that we cannot spiritually evolve and return to our true ascended soul selves.

“The information age” has gone from an assist to a detriment. We must dismiss all beliefs, information, fears, programming, data, memory, etc., i.e.: “crash the computer”, in order to receive the messages which we truly require in order to become free. Those messages – our inspiration – can come from only our Source/Divinity/Higher Self. We must turn our attention away from the world and what appears to be its problems and get on with this assignment of clearing ourselves, if we are ever to become free.

I love you (I love you, Divinity, which is all of us and everything)

I’m sorry (I’m sorry for bringing, to this situation or this divine being, my memories which are assessing the circumstances and influencing my experience.)

Please forgive me (Please forgive me for bringing my memories, judgements, fear, information, traumas, ‘knowledge’, data, ‘facts’, and opinions of the ‘there and then’ into the Here and Now.)

Thank you (It is done. So be it)

These phrases encompass love, correction, forgiveness, and gratitude.

This is all we require to live in love and peace.

Part 2: The Solution to 'Law and Commerce' is 'Love and Dominion'

Published by admin under Knowing Who You Are

For my entire life, philosophically, and, for over thirty years, pragmatically, I have searched for a solution to "the problems of the world". Intuitively, I knew that every single problem had to do with "money" ($) and it certainly appeared as if everything were about "money" and "not money" ($ and not $), yet, still, "money". If the problem were not $, then the solution must be $. Because I always seemed to have enough $, one might wonder why I was so plagued by the worry of not $, but I was, so I went looking for a solution. Over the past 14 years, I have finally learned that we cannot expect to find a sane solution to an insane problem, within the insanity itself. We cannot see the entire picture, when we are seeing it from inside the frame. Think about how you can see the precise solution to everyone else's marital problems but you can't seem to figure out what to do about your own ... it's like that.

We are steeped in "commerce" and "law". It is difficult to think that there is anything, in our entire existence, that doesn't involve one of those two concepts. Yet, we know there is because we have fleeting glimpses of them: nature (if we do not have to pay to experience it), friendship (if it isn't based upon $), the love of our children (if we are not being conned into buying them something). Alright, never mind, I guess EVERYTHING is about commerce and law. Well, Darn!

So, thanks to my study of A Course In Miracles, the experiences of my friend, Nick, and the work of my friend, Robert (freedomfiles.org), I was able to step outside "law and commerce" to discover "love and dominion". Therein lies the solution to "$ and not $".

Where there is law, there is no love and, where there is love, there is no law.

Where there is commerce, there is no dominion and, where there is dominion, there is no commerce.

Since "dominion" essentially means "freedom", we can interchange the words, so:

In the first 2 pages of the KJV of the Holy Bible, there is dominion, thus, freedom and, in the remaining 1506 pages, there is law and commerce.

When we know who we are, we operate in love and we have freedom and, when we do not know who we are, we operate in law, without love, and we have commerce, without freedom.

As always, the choice is ours.

If the solution isn't simple, it isn't accurate

We now know that corporations (banks, companies, governments) have a system of accounting which is all their own. It is called "double-entry bookkeeping". It is numbers placed onto two sides of a ledger – a "t-chart" – debits and credits. Not only do ledgers have nothing to do with $ but also they have nothing to do with not $. This means that what we think of as $ – cash, money orders, cheques, credit cards, debit cards/bank accounts, bonds, stocks, precious metals, etc. is not in their realm; not even a bit. They do not, cannot, and will not use these. They are fictions and fictions cannot use tangibles. Only we, of substance, can use tangibles. Fictions use fictions. Things which do not exist, except on paper, i.e.: corporations, can make use of only things which also exist only on paper, i.e.: numbers on a ledger. Numbers get moved via paper and via EFT – electronic funds transfer. There is nothing else which a fiction can use; nothing.

All debt is created on paper, so, all debt can be offset via other pieces of paper.

No amount of what we think of as $ can offset or pay or discharge or handle or settle any of their alleged debt. Only the "voucher", a piece of paper, which they insist upon being returned to them, can handle their debt for their accounting. So, where goes the $ – cash, cheque, money order, etc., when we send them to a corporation. Well, since fictional corporations can't use them, they get passed along to corporate executives, the IMF, and the World Bank.

Why are they collecting all the cash? At some point in our history, the banks forced us to become dependent upon $. We all believe we need it. If we have less than we think we need, we become fearful. Fear is the emotion by which people can be controlled. So, it stands to reason, if you want to control people, you keep them in a state of fear and the best way to do that is to take from them that which they inherently believe they need. Ergo, they have created a slave-labour force because, via our labour, they give us $ which we believe we need and then they take back enough of it to cause us to live in fear, which is really the only thing they want from us – our fear. Not only do they require our fear, in order to control us, but also they require it because this is the emotion on which they thrive. They cannot go near “love”. It is kryptonite to them. Say! Here’s an idea! What if we all behaved lovingly towards one another! What if we quit charging our fellow man and completely gave up the $ racket! Then the controllers would run out of energy and cease to function.

When these same people threaten us with foreclosure, repossession, cessation of service or goods, etc. it is nothing other than extortion, which is a commercial crime. But let’s not bother charging them with this because we don’t have to do so. All we have to do is realize who we are and order them to handle their own accounting. It is not our job, it is not up to us to “make right” a game which is all theirs. They are on this earth to provide a service for us and, if they want to make a game out of it, by drawing up accounts, they can do so, but it has nothing to do with us. Besides, if, indeed, we truly did owe them for whatever they provided, I’m sure they would just send us a bill telling us that this is what it cost them (in $), they would appreciate being reimbursed for it, and we would be happy to comply. However, we all know that we never get a bill; we get only a “statement of account”. All that means is that they want to keep us apprised of what they did for us, amounts, dates, purchases, etc. It has nothing to do with anyone “owing” anyone because, how could we possibly pay them, even if we did “owe” them, when their entire system cannot handle the means which we use to handle transactions with our fellow man.

When I was young, my mother’s friend cut her hair for her. My mum would take her friend a gift for this. She never gave her $. My mum’s friend was giving her time and talent to my mum and, clearly, my mum wanted to compensate her, in a manner more polite than $. But corporations are set up for the sole purpose of giving us what is, already, rightfully ours because we have dominion over the earth and everything which comes from the earth. Believe me, they are compensated before they even think of giving us said service because, otherwise, how would they have the means to set up all that was involved in doing so? But, from wherever that initial start-up cost came is also from where all other costs are covered. They do not need us or our labour or our $ to handle these costs. Again, corporations, banks, governments do not operate in the same system that men and women do. They do not want, from us, a gift of a pretty, pink vase to put on their mantle. They cannot use it; they use numbers on ledgers, as the tools of their accounting game.

Quit giving corporations something that has nothing to do with the corporation, or what you received from it, or how it operates. Their realm is completely separate from us. Since corporations are controlled by governments which are controlled by banks, the only reason any of them take from us that which we use, i.e.: our cash, is in order to control us. But we cannot be controlled, if we know who we are.

How do we let them know that we know who we are and, also, that we will no longer be sending them what we know corporations cannot use? We tell them. I have sent letters to CRA, IRS, and other US and Canada corporations. Their responses were threatening. Part of their job is to check to see if we really do know who we are. Rob says: "They are here to teach us about God. Darkness is a part of God. Don't fear it."

All the threatening letters I've received are laughable, once I get over the initial shock, because, after all the threats, the very last line is the tip-off: "You can still pay, via credit card, cheque, etc. Call this number to let us know." Check for that line first because then you'll know that everything which precedes it is just a hoot.

The drift of the letter must include three things:

1. Who we are: We are not a Name or Date of Birth. God, of Chapter 1, Genesis, did not create names, calendars, laws, or commerce. It was "LORD God", of Chapter 2, (the Annunaki and/or the Elohim) who named God's man and woman, "Adam and Eve", whom he had captured and put into the Garden of Eden (the gated paradise/jail) as his slaves. LORD God did not want Adam and Eve to know that they had dominion over the earth and over every living thing upon the earth, so he told them not to eat the fruit from the tree of the knowledge (of good and evil). Fortunately, the serpent told them that they did not have to obey any alleged authority outside themselves and so they found out the truth and were no longer "naked" (without knowledge). No wonder they were "expelled from the garden" (read:

“freed from jail”). The LORD God could not keep them enslaved after they learned the truth about who they are.

2. The law, under which they operate: In the provinces, it is easier to demonstrate this, however, in the states, all oaths end in “So help me God” which shows that they know God is supreme. Also, the Pledge of Allegiance states that the USA is “one nation under God”. Since anything with a name or title is a person and, ergo, a fiction, the existence of which cannot be proven, it is under the law. Law applies to persons and not to men and women. All controllers defer to God.

3. An Order, for them to follow: They need us to tell them what to do. Remember, they have no energy unless they get it from us – which is why we want to be sure we send them love and not fear. They work for us so we must instruct them on what to do, but not how to do it, because this is their game, not ours. They need to know that we know we are the boss. We are a director of a play. All that happens is, purely, due to what we say, however, how the particular actor chooses to act, within that particular role, is up to him, not up to us, as director, because the entire reason we hired him, in the first place, is because we trust that he knows how to act. Think of corporations that way.

It is so important to keep in mind that we are not a Name and, if we identify with a Name (or date of birth or title or religion or profession or college or political party or race or sex or nationality or tribe or country or another person), the controllers know that we are one of theirs. The hardest thing about which we will have to change our minds is that we are not the Name. We have identified with the Name, from the instant we were born; ... well, in my son’s case, two weeks later. The Name has been with us every moment of our lives so, it is a very convincing piece of evidence. People even take exception to being called something that is not exactly what they believe their Name to be. We truly do believe we ARE a Name, yet, nothing could be further from the truth.

So, to recapitulate:

We must know not only who we are but also who we are not;

We must know who the controllers are, why they want to control us, and their exact means of doing so;

We must know how to apply how we know who we are and who we are not, in order to get out from under the control of those whose intent it is to control us.

Part 3 will outline how we must live amongst one another, in order to have "life" work for all of us.

Solution to the Authority Hoax: If it isn't simple, it isn't accurate.

Published by admin under Knowing Who You Are

Solution to the Authority Hoax: If it isn't simple, it isn't accurate.

"Complicated" is a characteristic of either those who do not "know" or explanations by those who do not want us to "know". "Simple" is always gentler, smoother, and more concise; ergo, more accurate.

Think of all the subjects which we consider to be complicated; rather, that we were told are complicated: medicine, law, religion, politics, banking, etc. Do we really need to know them? Do we even want them in our lives? They were designed for the purpose of controlling us, yet, we can be controlled only if we defer to those who claim to be able to interpret them and "simplify" them for us. From where did they get their information which allows them to know how to simplify complicated disciplines? Now, that's a facer, isn't it? It came from the "authorities" who told them that these subjects were complicated and needed interpretation by someone "in authority". This is tantamount to "teachers teaching teachers teaching teachers."

In other words, we were deliberately set-up to believe that there are things we must know, yet, can't possibly know, unless some "authority" explains it all to us. So, those of us who fell for this "authority hoax" seek out doctors, attorneys, bankers, priests, etc. in order to tell us how to run our lives because all we know are the simple aspects of life: health, love, kindness, doing what we love to do and serving our fellow man whilst doing so. There is nothing complicated about those concepts. So, we have been invited to be dependent upon those who claim to know more about something about which we neither need nor want. Also, it evidences that we are continually being conned into believing the main myth – that we are separate; not only separate but also not equal to one another. Weren't we all born "equal"?

Since I have already exposed the societal weapons of propaganda and control (medicine, law, religion, schooling, etc.), let's take a look at the original, deliberate deception.

For years, I refused to use the Bible for legal purposes (or for any purpose) because I knew it had been so tampered with, re-written, and altered to suit the agenda of those in control. I continued to hear, "But it is THEIR law book." I would respond, "Yes, it is THEIR law book, NOT mine." I knew the entire book was propaganda, fiction and, therefore, inaccurate because it applied to "them". It had nothing to do with me and I wasn't about to compromise my integrity by shoving it in their faces any more than I would bring their statutes, laws, etc. to them, in order to support my position. None of it had anything to do with my principles. Why would I make use of or refer to anything that isn't the "truth"?

Note that both "the law" and the entire Bible (except for the first chapter –1.5 pages) are very complicated. The alleged leaders of all religions and all law societies do their best to have us believe that we must go to them for interpretation. Both "Law" and the Bible, apparently, are not understandable by people like us. The simple truth, of both these, is that true "Law" and the "word of God" are both extremely simple, straight-forward, and easy to comprehend for all of us. Those whose intent it is to complicate both "law" and "the word of God" are doing so for their own gain. All lawyers, judges, priests, ministers, rabbis, popes, etc. are in the racket of "professing to know what's true", strictly for profit, not for prophet. Their intent is to keep everything a big mystery, to be understood by only them and, hence, we must go to them for council. This egotistical nonsense is the biggest tip-off that whatever so-called 'truth' they have to tell us is, indeed, false.

Why would we ever consult anyone or anything other than our higher selves, (the collective unconscious) for information? Why would we ever think that someone knows better than we do about our health, our bodies, our spiritual evolution, our education, and how we are to conduct our lives? Why would we defer to anyone unless, somehow, they have convinced us that: they know more about us than we do; – OR – that they have "authority" over us?

But, how can that be?! They must have something to gain ... either "money" or power over us, or both.

KJV Holy Bible

Thanks to my friend, Robert, (freedomfiles.org), I finally grasp the true purpose of the Bible. I have resisted including the Bible as a solution to our situation, for several reasons, and Rob has set me straight. Since the Bible was both written by and edited by men, the entire book is a work of fiction. Right off the bat, we are dealing with human foibles, memories of their pasts (we now know "pasts" don't exist, except in the mind), egos, misinterpretations, perceptions influenced by programmed beliefs and, ergo, by emotions. At the top of page one, I was stunned to be shown: "The First Book of Moses called GENESIS". This tells me that this is a story written by a man the existence of whom we have no proof. YIKES!

But Rob says that there is some truth within the book of fiction (rather like a biographical novel) and that truth is simple, accurate, and completely uncomplicated, requiring absolutely no scholarly interpretation, whatsoever. That truth is in the first chapter, wherein the Creator is referred to as "God". After Chapter 1, the only "God" mentioned is "Lord God". Why the change? Weren't we doing rather well with just "God". Didn't we grasp that "God" meant the one love–light–consciousness which created all? The fact that the loving, creative "God" disappeared after Genesis, chapter 1, and an unloving, punishing "Lord God" sprang up to take its place, is highly suspicious to me. I wish I hadn't resisted the Bible so vehemently because, now, I know that I would have spotted (had I read it), the most glaring contradiction which I cannot imagine how everyone else missed.

If God created man and woman (chapter 1) why did the LORD God have to repeat the process in chapter 2, by making Adam and Eve? The answer is that they are not one and the same. God created man and woman and the LORD God created the fictions. Fictions, as we all know, now, have NAMES! In the Bible all the fictions are spelt in uppercase, e.g.: LORD, MOSES, JESUS, just as they are in our present commercial world, because the Bible is a book about Commerce. Adam and Eve were not Capitalized, for the very reason that they belonged to, i.e.: were the property of, LORD God, who was the owner and Master over them. So, now, Christian "names" are spelt the way Adam and Eve are spelt, in order to deceive us into believing that by altering the spelling of a name, we can avoid becoming a "living thing", as "living things" are those who have relinquished their status of "man, created by God" for a "title" which all names are, regardless of how one spells them. We must quit identifying with the Name.

Adam and Eve were given Names. God the Creator did not 'name' us. He lovingly allowed us to BE and, in fact, gave us dominion over the earth and everything on it. How trusting and kind that God must be! The "Lord God", however, is the opposite (inverse) and, for the entire remainder of the Bible (1506 pages), the Lord God is punishing, vengeful, jealous, wrathful and, hence, must be the entity – perhaps Lucifer or the Lord of the Anunnaki – which gave us the ego mind and began the entire world of fiction, the belief that we are separate, that there is an authority over us. The Lord God is the ego mind – the mind of fear, separation, and belief that we are not equal. This state of mind creates competition and so, what resulted from that was the Commerce Game. After all, isn't the ego mind the aspect of us which plays games and which manifests punishing, competition, fear, belief in separation, and unloving characteristics? It most certainly is not the spirit mind.

So, it dawned upon me that the Bible, like everything else in existence, has two parts to it ... a duality. Again, I am reminded of the page of Rules in the game, Monopoly. If we opt to play the game, we must be prepared to suspend our beliefs about what might be "true" and be prepared to get clobbered by the Banker, not to mention clobbered by our fellow man, since the name of the game is to charge our fellow man/players. The only way to win any game is if everyone else loses.

Just before we begin to play the game, we approach the board knowing we are friends, knowing that we are more powerful than the game (not vice versa), and knowing that, when we end the game, we'll all be friends and equal, again. However, in order to play the game properly, we must forget those three things. I suspect that those of us who opt to live in love for our fellow man and maintain our dominion over "all living things" need read no further than Genesis, chapter 1. If we opt to forget who we are, play the game of commerce, and behave in unloving, fearful, competitive ways, then, the entire remainder of the Old Testament, plus the New Testament, are the laws and rules by which the commerce game is played.

Chapter 1 is about LOVE and the entire remainder of the Bible is LAW. "Where there is law, there is no love; where there is love, there is no law." Moses got the 10 commandments from the LORD God, not from God the Creator, as God the Creator gave us no laws. God the Creator loved us and trusted us to treat each other lovingly and as equals because it/we knew that we are all one. We knew who we were, but we forgot.

What about those of us who realize that the game (the complete description of which is the entire Bible, after chapter one) has caused nothing but sorrow, loss of self-realization, and the relinquishing of our own personal power, love, light, and energy to those who control the game. I am not saying that the remainder of the Bible isn't valuable text; I'm saying that it applies only to those who want struggle in their lives. The game of Monopoly is a game of struggle, war against our fellow players, and the bank never loses. If there is a win, it is an empty win, because neither the winning nor the losing, of any game, has anything to do with who we are. The Bible is a great rule book for those who insist upon playing the commerce game, believe we are separate, and choose law over love, but, for those of us who are tired of it, we must remember that the only pertinent part which applies to those of us who want to remain in love and serve our fellow man from love, is that we have “dominion over all creeping things.”

Anyone reading this essay has already discovered that all who relinquish their status of “man” to that of a titled entity, e.g.: cop, teacher, judge, doctor, priest, attorney, minister, banker, CEO, etc. i.e.: those who identify with who they believe themselves to be, as opposed to who they really are – a creation of a loving consciousness – are a “creeping thing that creepeth upon the earth”, henceforth: “creeps”. The creeps who operate, within the laws given from Genesis, ch. 2 onward, are those over whom we have dominion. We must be sure to tell them, at every opportunity and in every situation.

So, I asked Rob, “If we were to go to Idaho, what would you bring along, in order to handle the idiocy of the titled entities, who think they know who they are, in the little houses, at the imaginary line, just south of us?” Rob is the least resistant man I know. He seems to be very accepting of everything which appears to come his way. Maybe that is because he knows that nothing “comes his way”; rather, he knows that the situations in which he finds himself are for the benefit of his own spiritual evolution. He told me, “I would take only the KJV Holy Bible. It is their law book; it proves that I have dominion over them. That they (or the alleged titled “authorities” to whom they defer, e.g.: the Queen) have sworn a false oath upon it, proves they have agreed to it.” I suddenly felt much safer from the creeps.

What so many of us are doing – what I was doing for 13 years – is trying to find a loophole within the rules, or find the rule by which we’ll win, or find a rule which will compel the creeps to follow their own rules, or to force them to do as we say. But the game we are playing is for creeps, only. I would have to become a creep in order to win a creep’s game. Or, even if I managed to remain honourable and still win a creep’s game, my winning it would make me a creep, wouldn’t it? This is the game the rule page of which might just as well read, in its preface: “You are all powerful, all loving, all consciousness, all energy, and all light. Are you sure you want to relinquish all that in order to experience an empty win? How will you feel after you have defeated another aspect of your own self? Better? Not bloody likely!"

The entire point of any game is to pretend that: 1. what is true and real is not true and real; and, 2. what is not true and real is true and real. In order to play it, properly, and with the adventure and excitement we all wanted, we had to forget that we are all one consciousness and we had to believe we are separate from one another. This is what playing the commerce game is all about. The biggest problem with this game is that we all agreed to play it ... we must have or we wouldn't be here. Maybe, if I change my mind about the ostensible value of winning this game, the next time I'm offered the opportunity to come to this dimension-frequency-planet-lifetime, in order to play it, I'll know better than to get mixed up in something which can only hurt not only me but also all other aspects of me. What a bore! If I prove, by my daily living of life, now, that I want only to love and serve my fellow man by doing what I love to do, my guess is that my next opportunity will be to spend my life in a place-dimension-time where we all love and serve one another by doing what we love to do."

So, the Authority Hoax can be exposed with one line from a book which all agents – those who have relinquished their status as 'man', in order to take on a title of ostensible authority – are required to follow or they wouldn't be allowed to remain in the position of agent which they hold. They have, most likely, not noticed that there is very little truth in this volume of fiction and they are equally likely to be completely unaware that the one, tiny part which is true is what will cause them to lose the game, now that we have found it.

Now, do we know who we are well enough to allow them to catch on to this? Can we do so lovingly? At some level of their consciousness, they know that, by continuing to harm others, they are harming themselves. Can we, maybe, even bring them to the light to see that, if they were to relinquish their job and title, they would become even more powerful than they believe themselves to be, in their present (lack of) status. The creeps have been told, by those whom they believe to have authority over them, that they have authority over others. Clearly, they did not think this through or they would have seen the blatant flaw in this idiotic concept.

Anyone who has the power to make you believe absurdities also has the power to make you commit atrocities. –Voltaire

I said to Rob, "I do know that no one has any authority over me unless and until I grant it to them." His comment was staggering, "Not even then. Only the Creator has any authority. You are God's creation and only that love–light–energy–consciousness power, aka, God, can "authorize". God is the supreme authority and author of it all. You do not have the authority you think you have (unless you live, continuously, in your spirit mind, and trust only your intuition which tells us the word of God, not to be confused with the ego mind which tells us the word of LORD God). So, if you think you have authorized someone else to have authority over you, for example, by having signed something which both of you have construed as your having granted authority, either by willingness or by coercion, it has no clout. You had no authority to give away your authority." YIKES! Again, I felt safer from the creeps.

This resonates with, "You cannot sign away your rights." Recently, I realized that the only purpose of a "waiver" is to bring to mind the fact that we are all responsible for our own experiences. It has nothing to do with signing away any right to bring suit, if we have been "wronged" (even though all waivers read this way), because we cannot be "wronged". All our experiences are our responsibility. Waiver or no waiver, we all have the right to contract and the right to lay claim, yet, what sort of admission to a lack of one's personal power does this evidence?! Making someone else responsible for our experience is as crazy as believing that the Bible is anything more than a rule book for a vicious game which appears to be justifiable solely because someone wrote a book on how to play it. The Holy Bible can be found everywhere – even in prison – because it is the propaganda of the creeps who want us to continue playing a game we can never win.

I've noticed that people who identify themselves as "Christian", thereby ruling out all aspects of their true, limitless, loving nature, believe there is 'truth' in the Bible. They are accurate, but that truth is only the truth about the vicious game of commerce, the vicious rules, and the vicious egos that adore playing it, not the truth about the loving aspects of our true spirit selves, the loving aspects of the consciousness which created us, and the consciousness of who we really are. Not counting the first page and a half, the entire 1508 pages of the Holy Bible, are just crap! If there ever were anything of value within those pages, whoever edited it out, for King James, et al, did so, not for our benefit but for the benefit of the creeps who control us (the Vatican, the Crown, and the Banks). We live in a world of duality, a mirror image (inverse) fiction of what is real. We live in a world of utter insanity.

We will NEVER have a solution for "commerce" because our true nature – our spirit self – does not really want it. A Course In Miracles says that the job of the ego mind is to, "seek and do not find". It is the desire of the ego mind to continue to dig in the same hole, year after year, and not truly want to find an answer. The spirit mind knows that the true answer – love – is outside the game. The name of that game is Chaos. What our true selves want is Peace. The creeps are keeping our focus upon the world, upon commerce, and upon finding a "solution" to both commerce and the problems of the world (the cause of which IS commerce), so that we will not find freedom where it truly is ... within. Letting go of the continuous search is way too distasteful for the ego mind to contemplate.

Genesis 1, ch. 26: "Let us make man in our image; after our likeness" sounds as if WE, as the ONE love–light–energy–consciousness, are co-creators. Did we include the opposite in order to have a protagonist in our adventure? If our creation is, indeed, a "duality", we had to create something that is not we – a "mis-creation" ... enter, the creeps. We created the creeps solely to experience the contrast ... to pretend that what is, isn't and what isn't, is. Since we have become caught up in the game, the best way to survive it is to remember that it is a game. There is no solution to it, until we all remember that there is nothing to solve, and there is no end to it, until we all quit playing.

If we are operating in their realm, they will destroy us because, by our merely acknowledging their processes, documents, and laws, we prove that we still believe that they have authority over us. Remember the story of "what furs?" As long as he kept asking, he did not acknowledge, agree to, or accept their offer to contract on the matter of “illegal hunting” and the case was dismissed.

Now that we know we operate in a complete fiction, I feel certain that no solution TO commerce can be found IN commerce. If we want a solution based in “truth, we cannot continue to look in the fiction. We have been given the answer to the puzzle in Genesis, Chapter 1, Verses 26-28.

The only way to prevail against their viciousness is to prove that we know who we are. The only way to do that is to address them, man to man-with-title, and let the man-with-title know that we (with no title) have dominion over all things (e.g.: titles). Our use of their forms, their language, their laws, trying to “understand” them, etc. proves that we believe they exist and, as long as we think so, they do.

Both resisting and petitioning which, by giving our energy, attention, and emotion to something that is unreal, whether in the form of either fear or anger, only grant these “creeps” even more power over us. By the stunts that they are pulling, they keep our energy and focus in our first chakra – fear for our survival. This is how we are controlled. The concept of “there is no authority outside ourselves” is the hardest thing for us to learn. We cannot be controlled as long as we remain focused on love.

The creeps’ agenda are to keep us in fear - in our first chakra energy - fear for our survival. When we are at this level of frequency, they can control us. If we were to ascend into our 4th chakra - love - they would lose all control over us because this is not a frequency they can access. If we can operate from love, be love, accept love, then they will cease to exist in our realm. They cannot operate, be, or accept love, as this is simply out of their territory. If we are there, they have no control over us.

Since the creeps feed off our emotions, if they get fear from us, they become more powerful. As long as they can keep people in fear, they can remain in control. Those of us who opt to vibrate, oscillate, and function in love cannot be harmed because we do not fear. What if they can get only love from us? Since “we are what we eat”, what might happen to them? Isn’t this what we want?

"You never change things by fighting the existing reality. To change something, build a new model that makes the existing model obsolete." – R. Buckminster Fuller, 1895-1983, Architect, Author, and Inventor

Love is the Answer, Whatever the Question

There is no law, divine or otherwise; there is only intent. Intent is driven by fear or love. Love has no agenda or ritual; it just is. It is through our hearts that we awaken the true power of who we are and this is why so much energy is put into creating conflict.

It seems as if we are continually saying to the alleged bullies: "If you cross this line.....; alright, if you cross this line...; alright, well, this is your last chance", and on it goes. If we could either show them love energy or simply walk away from them, thereby removing all our energy from them, what would they do, then? Whenever we question how to treat others, in any particular situation, the correct answer is always to treat them in the loving way. Are we aware of what we are doing, at all times?

About every situation, Hew Lin asks, "What is it about me which brings me to this situation? This new situation is only to remind me that I am here to release connected memories." We all know that memories do not exist (because they are of the past and the past doesn't exist, except in our minds which are completely unreliable) and what we believe to be true has been distorted by our perceptions which include our emotions, programming, and previous decisions. We must look at every situation as brand new; otherwise, we are allowing our programmers to run us. So far, they are prevailing but this is due to our lack of due diligence in applying what we know, in our hearts, to be true.

"Let us make man in OUR image and after OUR likeness... and let them have dominion ... over all the earth. ... And God blessed them and God said unto them, ... have dominion ... over every living thing that moveth upon the earth" – Genesis 1:26 and God is the creator. There is only one God, so who is the "our"? It must be we as "the ONE". We are it. We are all shards of a shattered pane of glass. I suppose we could look at one another as separate, but that would be ludicrous, now that we know we all came from the same pane. So, we made it very clear, right up-front, that we have dominion over the earth and everything upon it.

Since these few lines are our remedy, we might ask, "Why didn't they just omit the only lines which have any truth, aka, our remedy. My friend, Ray, always said to me, "There must be a remedy or we could charge them with fraud", to which I have always responded with, "But, since enforcement has always been the problem for us, how are we going to charge them with fraud, when they continue to change their song and dance, in order to evade us?" Also, "Why would they care what we do, when the entire mess is ALL fraud?"

Well, within the fiction, they can do what they want and, since they must provide the remedy – somewhere, because even they operate within a duality – they hide it in plain sight ... in the very beginning of their law book. The fact that most people have paid too much attention to the rest of the book (specifically the parts about the Jesus character) and overlooked the only lines in existence, wherein the truth is revealed or, in the case of some of us, completely ignored the entire book—never mind just the first chapter, or, since all the religions and law societies of the world have deliberately directed our attention to every word EXCEPT the truth, it stands to reason that we missed the only part worth knowing.

What we do to another we do to ourselves. The game is about whether we can remember who we are, before we completely collapse under the belief that we are separate from one another. If we are playing a game of "can we figure out that we are all one consciousness, before we destroy each other", we all win; otherwise, we all lose. Yes, I consider that there are ETs, malicious beings from elsewhere, heartless beings on this planet, that our bodies and egos are, quite likely, just a computer program, run by incredibly brilliant, albeit cruel entities. Still, we, as part of the one love–light–energy–consciousness–creator–god, opted to include them in our creation, in order to get back to remembering who we are. It appears as if we have pulled out the big guns, in order to remind ourselves and, as we are still resisting the recollection that it is all “we”, we are considering starting the game all over again because we just might not get it this time around. I suspect we have done this all before.

What's True About "the Debt":

Part 1

The 'debt' really does exist, but only because we operate in a 'debt-money' system. There is no substance; i.e.: money which we can use to pay our debts. Since we, the private, are now the only ones who can create anything of any value, the public (a dead, bankrupt fiction), must rely upon us to make everything happen and that includes creating more debt for everything to function. We all think of 'debt' as a bad thing, yet, it is only how this particular economic system operates. So, 'being in debt' is a neutral situation – neither 'good' nor 'bad'. 'Zero-balance' means that everything is at zero. If the public draws from zero, within a liability/debt account, they have a negative; if they add to zero, they have a positive, yet, because it is all debt/liability, they can have negative debt and positive debt. 'Debt' is not bad; it just is.

Conversely, we, the private, create credit. Every time we sign anything, we create credit. "The signature is the money". There is an asset account, backed by the birth certificate, the application for which was signed by a parent, thereby creating a trust account. It also must have a zero balance. When we draw from it, there is negative asset and when we add to it, there is positive asset. The public operates in debt/liability and we operate in credit/asset, AND NE'ER THE TWAIN SHALL MEET

(except via a token, aka a 'Name'); One account cannot connect with the other. The public operates from debt and we operate from asset. The minute our asset touches the public, it becomes debt and the instant public debt touches the private, it becomes asset. Let's use the power bill as the example:

The power company has access to the trust account, from which it draws, in order to have the capital to provide us power. At the end of the month, those at the power company send us a 'statement of account'. What the top part is telling us, without actually stating, is, "We went to your asset trust account and withdrew $100 in order to provide you power; is that alright with you, Creditor? If so, please just evidence your acceptance of this by writing on this statement, 'Accepted, the account number, the number of the bond backing the account, which only you would have, and your signature.' As we have sent the cheque for you to endorse, which will bring your trust account balance back up to zero, please sign and endorse it and return it to us with the statement so that we can balance our books." The story is the same for credit-card statements.

What they actually write is, "Be sure to return the voucher with your payment", thereby misleading us to think that we are required to give them $100 worth of our labour, along with their cheque which offsets the liability, and nothing else. They are simply soliciting our agreement which our signature indicates. So, the voucher/cheque will balance not only their books but also the asset trust account. But somehow, we got roped into forking over our debt-notes (which they want as much as we do because we all use dollars to obtain what we need and want, yet have nothing to do with the account with the power company). These debt-notes have nothing to do with "paying our bills"; there is nothing to 'pay', nothing with which to 'pay', and the account cannot be 'paid' – it can only be offset with the cheque/voucher they sent us for our signature.

Now, our cash is in the public and ought not to be because the public doesn't operate in cash; it operates via double-entry bookkeeping, 't-charts' of asset and liability, because there is no 'money'. Since all these debt-notes are out there as "the debt", in the "public", this means that we are the cause of the "public debt" which must be offset. But, what we are told is that the public debt must be “paid” and, of course, this is an impossibility because if we ‘pay’ ‘public debt’ with ‘debt’, all that occurs is that we double the debt. The only way out of this mess is for us to do whatever it takes to remove the debt-notes, aka ‘cash’, aka ‘the debt’ from the public. For a long time, we thought that we had to offset the public debt, but the public debt has not been caused by anything other than our having put cash where it not only doesn’t belong and cannot be used in any productive manner but also is creating havoc with the economy. Now that we know that we must get the debt out of the public, so that there is no more ‘public debt’, how do we recall the trillions of dollars of debt?

We call in the biggest, best, most-efficient debt collectors in the world: the IRS. If they can’t do it, no one can. So, by filing the correct forms with the IRS, we let them know how much of our cash/labour/debt-notes we have errantly put out there into the public. We are so sorry we made this ridiculous mistake, but, we took the word (“Be sure to return this voucher with your payment” – hmmm. I guess I have to send a cheque along with the voucher – BEEEEP! Wrong-o!) of people at corporations, forgetting that corporations are “for-profit”, faceless, heartless, entities with no intent other than ‘economic growth’ and to control the planet through the use of our energy. Sure, we might encounter a friendly voice at the other end of the phone, but she has been as programmed as the rest of us in our thinking that we are obligated to “pay our bills”. Very few of us know that with every dollar we put into the public and neglect to claim it back, we are creating more and more problems for our fellow man, never mind for ourselves and our families.

IRS to the rescue! Filing the proper forms at the proper time will allow the IRS to go back to the banks which are withholding the tax – the credit we created by writing cheques, wiring funds, using debit and credit cards, etc. and request that the funds be returned to the creditor. The IRS will gladly deposit, into our bank accounts, that which the bank has been withholding, in escrow, because when funds are in escrow, no one can use them. They are just sitting there. THAT is “the public debt”. If we don’t get the debt moving and functioning, we will be taken down by it. Our cash/labour/debt-notes will sit in escrow, doing nothing, for 36-47 months (depending upon when we put our cash into the public) when both we and the banks could be using it to continue to circulate and keep the economy moving. After this time, if we have failed to claim our abandoned cash, the banks will. THIS might be why banks got a bad name, yet, what's true is, we created our own problem by not knowing that we are responsible for recovering the funds and keeping us all out of debt. Our claiming a refund of our public funds will work for all involved.

The worst thing that is happening, right now, is that the public debt – our cash which we could all be using – is sitting and stagnating, in escrow. Only we can do something about this. The two causes of this huge problem are: (1. people are not requesting their funds be returned to them; and, (2. due to fear, people are slowing their spending. The staggering truth of all this is: the more we spend, the more we get returned to us. The faster the spend, the sooner we will get the funds returned to us. We must do a complete 180° flip on our regard and assessment of “the public debt”.

I write this only because realize that I cannot suggest to most people that we must remove ourselves from the Commerce Game. I am reminded of an old Beetle Bailey comic. Several soldiers are sitting around a table, playing poker; cigarettes are falling out of ashtrays or hanging from their lips, beer bottles are covering the table, soldiers have nearly fallen asleep on the table but are still holding their cards in their hands, with one eye open, etc. They appear completely exhausted, drunk, and dazed. Two higher ranking soldiers appear and one looks at the other, amazed by the idiocy of what he sees. The other officer says, “Well, no one wanted to quit when he was losing, no one wanted to quit while he was ahead, and no one would let the winner quit...” “How long have they been at it?” “Four days.” I think many of us are in this poker game. Will it ever end?

I suspect that we will have to do this for awhile before we feel avenged. I guess we have to experience “win” before we realize that there is no “win” when we are playing a game ... the winning of which is based upon clobbering our fellow man.

Part 2: What's Next?

Turning 60 afforded me some insight: Winning a game that exists only as a result of the projection of our fear for survival is still not a place where we want to hang out for any length of time. We can all see what is going on in the world. Anyone reading this will agree that, thanks to quantum physics and mechanics, an endless list of people have proven that what we see in 'the world' is purely, simply, and solely a reflexion of what is being projected by the thoughts in our minds, propelled by the emotion in our hearts, at any given time. Life on this planet is nothing like what we have all been raised to believe it is – not even close.

From the minute we arrive in this fictional world, we realize that there is an authority in our lives. We know that if mums do not feed us, we do not eat. Not much later, we grasp that everyone is trying to run our lives. Parents act authoritatively because their parents did so with them and they are only, unconsciously, projecting onto their children the way they were treated. This is simply the memory of the cell and, I hear, a specific part of the cell which holds memory, not the DNA which, until recently, we all thought.

Next, we go to school where we drown in authority. School is deliberately designed for our left brains. Socializing, games, art, and music are all right-brained and, although we are not discouraged from pursuing these, they simply are 'not as important as' the core subjects which we had to know, in order to graduate, in order to get a good job, in order to compete with and beat-out our fellows, in order to succeed in life. Are we there, yet? Academia never made anyone happy. I never had a conversation, with any friend, about academia, unless said friend were a teacher and his/her position was the "defence of" education or authority ... bleah! This is how children, full of creativity, spend the bulk of their childhoods – around people telling them that school is too serious a place to socialize which, we all discover, albeit too late, was the only reason we were there in the first place. What is life all about, anyway?

By the time we reach the age of seven, our core beliefs are: I'm not good enough; I'm not worthy; I'm insignificant; I'm not lovable; I don't exist; I don't have a life; I don't have a future; life is frightening, life is dangerous; I'm not allowed to make a mistake; if I make a mistake, I will be punished, ergo, I shall not venture forth because I might make a mistake; life is easier when the 'authorities' tell me how to live. These beliefs came from decisions we made, as children, when we were threatened, – when we feared for our very survival. These beliefs are 'compounded annually', at school, and are precisely what allows the alleged "authorities" to run our lives ... completely. These beliefs force us to defer to these authorities, whether they be parents, relatives, teachers, doctors, ministers, bankers, lawyers, judges, cops, peers ... "grown-ups", or whether they be the matching concepts of these, such as family, school, medicine, religion, commerce, law, what's vogue, the latest fashion, etc. ... anyone whom or anything that we have deemed to be 'better than', 'wiser than', 'more successful than', 'happier than', 'making more money than', 'in possession of more stuff than', 'trusted by more people than', 'receiving more attention than' ... we are.

When we focus on what is outside of us, we completely miss the most valuable aspect of life: our intuition. When we fail to listen to our intuition, which is the only source from which we can know what is best for our unique selves, we become one of the crowd which is so, so, so easily controlled by those whose intent it is to control us. What is the means by which we are controlled? To be kept in the vibration of fear – the same level of frequency at which we were when we made all those decisions about how we cannot live our own lives.

When I receive emails which are fear-filled, I know that the people who sent them are in fear and they are desperately seeking agreement because misery loves company and they want to be told how to live, in order to stop feeling the fear. For those of you who do this, please realize that you are the instigators of the fear and that you have been manipulated into feeling the fear by those who want you in fear because fear is the only emotion by which you can be controlled. Brave, courageous people who know who they are cannot be controlled. They might feel fear, yet, they do not take action from fear. They behave contrary to the disempowering emotion of fear.

If you are one who spreads fear, you make your own life worse, as it is emotion which creates life, so, being in fear, you create fearful circumstances. Egos love to waste your time looking for evidence and agreement. Egos love 'to be right'. You are being entrapped by your own mind. There is nothing 'wrong' with feeling fear, as long as you don't DO anything about it. There is nothing going on 'out there' of which you need to apprise us; there is only what is going on with your thoughts and emotions which need to be assessed. If you intend to bring others into a fear-filled existence, can you see that you are part of the problem? If you want your circumstances to change, you must opt to be part of the solution: change the thoughts you entertain.

Fear for our survival is 'base (first) chakra' energy. All the other 6 (at least) chakras are above it. Imagine life for those who never get to live beyond first chakra energy. They spend their entire lives in fear for survival and, as is the wont of the ego, they go about gathering proof that they are 'right' so they look for situations and people who also see life as fearful. This does not make them accurate; it only makes them 'right' which is the sole 'reason for being' of the ego mind. It lives to prove itself 'right'. Egos prefer to be 'right' than 'happy'. Don't fall for this nonsense.

I learned from my RET (Rapid Eye Technology) teacher that when we are, figuratively, 'kicked in the heart' which seems to happen to all of us in our early years, we all move away from our heart (4th) chakra which means that, in shifting our consciousness away from 'heart', the heart energy itself becomes diminished. No wonder heart disease is rampant! Interesting, men and women interpret this trauma differently and they shift both their energy and focus (their consciousness) 2 chakras away from the heart, yet, in different directions. Men shift down 2 chakras and women shift up 2 chakras. Men's energy moves down into their second (sex) chakra and women's energy moves up into their sixth (intellectual) chakra. Is there anyone more annoying than men whose "feelings" are about sex and women whose "feelings" are intellectual? Since that includes most of us, just think of yourself and everyone close to you. We've all heard the complaints, "Men, quit thinking with your penis!" "Women, get out of your head!" In my book, I described the treachery and horrors of the feminists who thought that corporations would be better off with women at the top. This might have been true, had these women remained women, but, they didn't. They put on suits and became men. Just what we need – more testosterone in the workplace. Believe me, masculine women are vastly more dangerous than feminine men. (Think 'female cops', as opposed to 'male interior designers'.)

The same people who operate the schools operate medicine, law, religion, politics, etc. We have literally been programmed to death. I mean it: we have been programmed completely OUT of knowing who we are when, in fact, only we can educate ourselves, heal our bodies, intuit what is best for us, evolve spiritually, and operate at such a high frequency that NONE of what society has to offer ought to have any appeal, whatsoever, to the spiritual beings that we truly are. How low class all society is! How plebeian! What dregs we have become! Yes, even those of us who have achieved what appears to be success. We were destined to much loftier positions than that where we allow others to presume authority over us. Who allows this and why? You know, now. It is we and it is our inability to "feel" and intuit. Do you see that all the institutions and establishments of society are designed this way? So that we are unable to feel and intuit? But, who or what created our society?

Getting back to quantum physics and mechanics, we all now know that what is in our lives began with us. In our fear, we projected onto our world our thoughts about ourselves, via our emotion which was and is, for the most part fear. We now know that what appears to be "out there" in the world, is the effect, manifestation, and reflexion of what is going on within us. This is why trying to heal anything, in what appears to be "our world", is absolutely futile if we do not correct the cause.

When I worked as a nurse, I was always disappointed to hear that a patient was intending to undergo any sort of surgery, but surgery "to get the cancer" made me the craziest. I had learned, from experience, that if I advised a patient not to allow a surgeon, who is totally uneducated on how the mind works, to chop off her breast, the only result was that I got fired; the patient still lost her breast. So, I realized that this is what the patient wanted, even though I knew she had been manipulated into wanting it. Inevitably, the patient was pleased by her loss of a breast (!!!) and would proudly tell me, "He got it all", meaning, the doctor got all the cancer out of her body. I was never able to resist asking, "Did he get your mind, as well?" Since the cancer began with her thoughts, interpretations, judgements, and decisions, about a traumatic event in her life, and brought into the physical realm via her fear, anger, or grief, the only way to get rid of it was to reverse-engineer the process. Begin with the emotion, get back to the thinking, then to the event, and release everything along the way. Chopping off breasts is neither a solution nor even real.

"Reality" is not real; the only thing 'real' is "we are". Any seeming physical solution is, literally, truly, and only, as David Icke says, "combing the mirror" when one has a bad-hair day. It will have NO impact, whatsoever. When people fail to correct the cause of cancer, it always returns. Ask any cancer patient. If she has not taken a look into her life, she will go right back to where she started. There is no healing outside the mind; there is nothing outside the mind. When I say "mind", I mean that which gets projected – a combination of: an experience, our interpretation of it which results in our thoughts, our judgement about those thoughts which results in a decision, and any combination of fear, anger, grief over that decision which creates our experiences in what we call "life" and the cycle begins again, with the experience we have just now created. What absurdity! This is why I can say that life is truly insane and what is prompting us to believe that we can do anything about life, outside ourselves, is total insanity. This includes: 'helping another', as we can only be an example, hence, we are almost always in an upward or downward spiral of life events because how we see the previous is how we will experience the next event. We are always in this process. I am fortunate only in that I am aware of it.

We cannot do anything; we can only be; there is nothing out there; there is only here; we cannot pre-empt for the future and we cannot correct the past; we have only now. Is this how the mystics, sages, and masters of life arrived at: BE HERE NOW ?

Now, we ought to take a look at all this in relation to how we are trying to correct the corruption on the planet. Every aspect of what is 'wrong' in this world is caused only and completely by commerce. All of it. But, let's start by recalling that everything we think we see "in the world" is only a reflexion of our best thinking and it all began with us. Everything we experience is due to our core beliefs which are caused by decisions having been made from fear for our survival and the world we see is the effect, caused by our projected fear. I'm not saying that there isn't love everywhere, all the time, in all of us, for everything; I'm saying that what we see in the world is simply the effect of most of the thinking, done by most of us, most of the time, which is the cause of all our angst.

Since love is all there is, it is all encompassing and can have no opposite. Since fear – love's seeming opposite – cannot exist, it is unreal. If fear is unreal, then anything ostensibly created by its projection is equally unreal. Since the world we experience is the physical manifestation of our projected fear, then the world is unreal.

This puts us into a vastly more powerful position, to change it all – all that which is not real. How simple! How powerful! If what is going on in the world truly were real, we would have a hell of a time trying to change all that! This is not to discount those who really are making a difference, but the real difference begins with their feelings, now with their actions. Every day and in every way, people all over the world are intending to accomplish this irrational, impossible, insane feat of changing the world without addressing the cause which is the game we are playing, based upon the projection of our fear for our survival, based upon the belief that we are separate from one another – the Commerce Game. The solution to the world problems caused by the Commerce Game, is right here, right now, with me. My choosing love instead of fear is the solution.

In my book, I set out to prove my premise that the banking system is fraudulent. I prevailed. I did experiments which proved it. These same methods could not be used now, in order to prove this, because what I did was years ago and those who didn't like what I did are now on the look-out for those who intend to do the same things. So, cops, courts, judges, et al now know how to thwart us, in a myriad of ways. What I've noticed, over the past 13 years, is that everything any of us have done, works – a bit. Every process we have ever tried has succeeded, at least for some of us, for some of the time, in some places. Then, it doesn't. Judges go to “judge school” every 6 months and learn how to handle those of us who have temporarily prevailed. Then the process comes to a screeching halt.

I finally woke up and reconciled what I know to be true with what I know to be true. We are doing this to ourselves. We are actually brilliant enough to have set up a situation, for the sole purpose of learning that the only thing in existence is love ... the only thing in existence ... is love. Everything else which appears to be in existence is unreal, doesn't exist, is reflexion, effect, and cause of thinking which is combined with strongly felt emotion.

The tragedy is that our emotions have been manipulated by society. We have been entranced and prevented from feeling the only emotion from which we can co-create. Feeling love is how to become love and is how to have it be the way we all want it to be. We can manifest only from love. Love is such a high frequency that it puts us back into the driver's seat. As long as we are in fear, we are being manipulated. The only way to remain in control is to be willing to be out of control. The very willingness to be out-of-control is love. Love is a 'willing' emotion and nothing is more powerful than love. I adore the actual statistics on this. The electricity of the heart is 100 times that of the brain and the magnetic power of the heart is 500 times that of the brain; unless it is vice versa, but, either way, if we want to be powerful, we must operate from the very place which we long ago shut down and created a society which kept women intellectual and analytical and which kept men sexual. What a waste of our true talent and energy!

We have all been fleeced, yet, again, who did this to whom? Our world is a manifestation of our thoughts and feelings. Knowing this allows us to do something about it. We are not helpless against our own creation. If this were the creation of the evil entities of this universe, we'd be sunk, but this simply isn't so. Yes, our thoughts and feelings are being manipulated, via the Authority Hoax and all other aspects of our societies, but *ULTIMATELY, WE ARE IN CHARGE OF THE THOUGHTS WE ENTERTAIN AND THE FEELINGS WE EXPERIENCE. OUR ACTIONS FROM THOSE THOUGHTS AND FEELINGS ARE WHAT DICTATE OUR LIFE ON THIS PLANET.

We are so in charge that we designed a game in order to wake us up to our true nature and our true intent – to shift into the love frequency. The commerce game can be won only by realizing that we created it for our benefit. Every seeming adversity to our lives is to trick ourselves to see if we can remember. We came here knowing that love is all there is, yet, in order to play the game, we had to forget. We even went so far as to identify with the token (the body, the name) we use to play the game. We truly cannot 'beat an opponent' in a game which was designed for the purpose of allowing us to realize that the only way to win is to remember who we are and to remember that nothing exists without love. Its almost existential, isn't it? Like ping pong balls in your head.

We cannot see the picture whilst seeing it from inside the frame. Once we truly walk away from the game, very miraculous things will be revealed to us. We know there is more. No one, in the past several hundred years, or in a society such as ours, or subject to a belief that we would be both winning and losing against ourselves, has experienced what we are about to experience. When we take a chance on our faith that our higher self – intuition – connection to source – subconscious mind – spirit self – co-creator – oversoul will take care of us, not only will it do so but also it will give us everything and more than we could ever imagine. If we stop to wonder "how", we have just, energetically, denied the entire process.

What are we doing?! We choose to trust a treacherous system of society – commerce – that has been proven to be not only completely unworkable but also downright vicious for 95% of us, while, in the case of our higher-self – our oversoul, which is connected to omniscient, omnipotent Source, and whose only job and full intent is to mind our complete well-being, via its wisdom, insight, and timelessness ... we choose not to trust that?! In fact, we completely ignore it ?!?!?

So many people lecture on spirituality, yet, they continue to charge their fellow man for lectures, books, etc. They are at the very pinnacle of our third dimension, so they appear to be very enlightened, yet, their failure even to glimpse the 4th dimension is evidenced by their belief that they have to charge their fellow man. I don't think the problem is that they want more 'money'; I think the real problem is that "not charging" (being free) has never even occurred to them. What does this tell us about their level of spiritual development?

There is an entire universe out there which we can access, utilize, and appreciate, if only we operate in the frequency where all is possible. Miracles appear for those without fear. So many of us have experienced miracles, just by letting go of the game: we quit charging our fellow man, quit worrying, and now trust that our oversoul will take care of us.

We're all one; we are all the same at our spiritual core; we are all co-creators with love because we ARE love. We can do this.

I want you all to know 4 things:

1. I am in the process of writing another article. I'll be tackling the subject of "commerce" from another perspective.

For those who want to remain in the Commerce Game, I recommend Brandon: www.creditorsincommerce.com

For those who are interested in getting out of the Commerce Game, stay tuned. I'll post an article, soon.

2. There are several websites where people are selling my book. My book has always been, is, and will always be free online at: www.spiritualeconomicsnow.net/solutions/How\_I\_08.pdf

3. I delete all the comments on my blog because I have discovered that 90% of them are spam, 7% are nonsense, 2% are vicious, and only 1% are from people who are still thinking and feeling. It is not worth my time to read them all for so few insightful comments. My apologies to the 1%.

4. I found, on youtube, the Twilight Zone episode I saw in 1960, that I mentioned in my book. Here is part 3/3, with the pertinent message:

IRS/CRA and the LOTTERY

Published by admin under Knowing Who You Are

I wonder if IRS/CRA employees ought to know this. You might want to pass it along to them; it IS the loving thing to do.

It just crossed my mind that you might be unfamiliar with the banking system. Allow me to use the "Lottery" as an example. People generally use cash to buy lottery tickets. The lottery pot is about $20M at any given time – CASH! If you won $8,000 in the lottery, you would take the ticket for verification. Would someone go to the cash drawer and count out your $8,000? No; he would write you a cheque. If you accepted the cheque and never did anything with it, nothing would occur. Nothing would change. No accounts would be debited; no accounts would be credited. That cheque is valueless until you endorse it. When you do, suddenly, it is worth $8,000. What's different? Your signature is what gave it value. This can be verified in §57.1 of the Bills of Exchange Act of Canada (your law) which states that the signature is the money.

Now, if you were to deposit that cheque, your account would be credited. If you were to cash the cheque, the bank would give you $8,000 cash. Then, what happens to the cheque? Its value to the bank is quite incredible because that credit can off-set the liability of your cash receipt or account credit and, now, their ledger is balanced at no cost to the bank.

Banks are permitted, by law (the Bank Act), to hypothecate the value and lend it out numerous times for dramatic profit. (For details on how banks make a fortune from your signature, Google: Money As Debt). Suffice it to say that the cheque became a huge asset – vastly more than its face value. So far, you have benefitted a bit and the bank has benefitted a lot, by your signature, but the real winner, by far, is the Lottery itself because the bank returned the cheque to them. Although it is worth only $8,000 on its face, the signature upon it grants it interminable value. That cheque gets sold on the securities market and it literally travels the world creating a profit each time it is sold. So, your signature has created another fortune, this time for the Lottery. Did they EVER have to dig into their pot of $20M in order to give you your win of $8,000? No. You thought $8,000 was a windfall, but the truth is, bankers profited by far more than you did and it was all funded by you. YOU created your lottery win.

Can you see that the Lottery is simply a cash-confiscatory game for the ones who run it – the World Bank? Can you see that IRS/CRA operates the same way? Can you see that IRS/CRA is just an agency of the International Monetary Fund and the World Bank? If you grasp this concept, you'll see that not only do I not "owe" IRS/CRA anything but also I was the source of value which will create egregious revenue for IRS/CRA which has nothing at all to do with the government of U.S.A. or Canada, or the states or the provinces, or the people of either. Its sole purpose is CASH-CONFISCATION. I am certain that you, also, have felt the effects of the IMF on your personal finances. Whatever your loss, it is important for you to know that it was all by design and intention.

Please realize the truth of this, before you consider confiscating, from me, the meagre amount that I have, compared to what IRS/CRA will receive, forever, from my signature. I created ALL the value and IRS/CRA is the beneficiary of that.

Then, please, consider a job more suited to your ethics. You'll feel much happier and your family will be very proud of you.

**Authority Hoax II – “the Trust Account” and “the Solution”**

Published by admin under Knowing Who You Are

Authority Hoax II – “the Trust Account” and “the Solution”

Imagine how people will interact with each other when they know they cannot harm another person, place, condition or thing without harming themselves. Imagine the difference when people, everywhere, accept the divine truth: as they give, so shall they receive. – Don Alejandro Cirilo Perez Oxlaj

The Trust Account

In my article, The Authority Hoax, I wrote: ‘The only thing you need to know about laws – codes, rules, regulations, statutes, by-laws, ordinances, constitutions, policies, legislations, laws, bills, acts, and even case law – is that they have nothing to do with you. The USA and CANADA, Inc., along with all other corporations (STATE OF CALIFORNIA, PROVINCE OF ALBERTA, etc.) have a Policy Manual, just as SEARS has a Policy Manual for employees. Unless we work for SEARS, their Policy Manual does not apply to us. The head servant of the mansion's kitchen staff put up a Notice which reads, 'No Refrigerator Raiding: 11 pm to 7 am'. Does the mistress of the house think that this applies to her? The only 'laws' by which we are bound are Nature's laws and our conscience.

For years, I was on the fence between wanting to know who I am and behaving accordingly so that I didn't have to play the commerce game, and wanting to know how to play the game so that I could win the game. It always seemed as if we were getting closer to the answer, but the investigation was interminable. Most researchers continue to look outside, rather than looking to themselves, recalling their experiences, and remembering who they are. It seems that, for all the riding 'madly off in all directions', all their various, personal agenda come down to only this: we are all tired of being controlled.

I notice that those who search legal land for the answer, albeit to no avail, still do learn much in the process and wind up wanting to sell their information because, "I put a lot of time and effort into this and I'm not about to give it away." But, isn't the reason that they did all this research because they wanted to do so? Now they want people to pay them for what they chose to do? The only information worth having is that which will allow us access to the Trust account. The very act of their charging their fellow man evidences that they do not know this, not to mention the dishonor, i.e.; they do to others what the banks are doing to all of us.

Due to all this 'learning', so many researchers have a penchant for wanting to utilize their information and this is what gets them into trouble. They write too much and they say too much – all because they want to be 'right' in thinking that years of study were not spent in vain, so they tend to take on the task of settling public matters, by acting as the liable party, instead of making the public servant do his job. The one who creates the liability, i.e. the public, must provide the remedy. Balancing their books is not our job. They work for us.

People who do not have this valuable information, paradoxically, are very willing to sell and tell what they purport to know. But, if we cannot figure this out by ourselves, it is no good to us. No one can tell us how to know who we are. To become free and to feel free is not a process... it is a realization.

I have received hundreds of emails from people who criticize me for not telling them how to implement what I wrote in my book. If I had included a 'how to' in my book, it would have been outdated by the time it hit the internet. I am stunned by the number of people who missed seeing, in my preface, 'I do not, cannot, and will not tell anyone what to do'. The title of my book is 'How I Clobbered...' not, 'How YOU Can Clobber...' I wrote the book to expose the fraudulent banking system and I did certain things to prove it. My book was simply and only a heads-up so people could think about conducting their commercial affairs accordingly and begin to experiment for themselves. I put the book on the internet free-of-charge. It offers only hints for you to realize who you are, which is all any of us need to know.

Of these hundreds of requests for 'what to do', not one ever asked me about the latter part of my book – 'remembering who you are'; the part about energy – which is all there is. In whatever we do or say, what matters is our energy and the attitude from where we behave, so my 'telling' someone what to say or do is worthless. Becoming free requires 'remembering who you are', so when you come across websites or seminars, just remember; those who sell and tell don't know, and those who DO know cannot tell. 'Knowing' is a private matter and one cannot make it public. The minute it becomes public, the win can no longer stand as a win. I had to look to myself. Accurate answers come effortlessly, from within.

In one of my snits of frustration, recently, I packed it all in (as I do episodically) and read Gregg Braden's book, The Spontaneous Healing of Belief – Shattering the Paradigm of False Limits. He reminded me of what I have known for decades – that we can create... in fact, that's all we can do. We don't do anything but create. We create every aspect of our life experience. If we really knew who we are, we would not be dabbling in any of this commercial investigation, particularly, because every bit of energy we hand over to those who seem to be running the planet only strengthens them. What we want to do is turn away from them and look to ourselves. Why fight someone else's creation when we have our own creating to do? We've already created them as they are; now, we must create something that will override that. As long as we are giving them our time, attention, energy, and emotion (which is what keeps them alive), those whom we most want to convince that we know who we are know that we do NOT know who we are by the very fact that we are involved with them and their silly 'policy manuals'. Dealing with agents, at their level, proves that we believe that the illusion of their authority is real and, ergo, the reality of ours is not. We ought to have nothing to do with them, other than to be sure they keep their word, honor their oaths, and do their jobs. Servants must always be monitored, lest they overstep their position.

If we knew who we are, we would have nothing to do with them. This includes their 'medicine', their 'schools', their 'law', their 'churches', their 'media', etc. – ALL designed to keep us from knowing who we truly are. Somehow, they know this; hence, every time we converse with them, frequent their places of 'worship', argue over 'payment', read their 'newspapers', go to their 'courts', follow or resist their "orders", attend their 'classes', visit their 'doctors', etc., they know that we do not know who we are and they treat us accordingly. If we knew who we were, we would be minding our own health, educating ourselves, conducting our own spiritual development, and not deferring to them for anything.

I simply cannot even imagine the enlightened beings of this planet poring over law books, writing paper, learning what to say in court, filing documents, attending seminars, paying for the latest process, etc. in order to get out of a situation which they know, in their hearts, simply does not involve them. They know who they are. I have concluded that, as long as we are still investigating any aspect of the commerce game, those who control it have us where they want us – IN the game, which they control, by THEIR rules, which apply only to them. I suspect that the less we know about their game, the better off we are. That is their business, not ours – and simply becoming very clear on who we are and acting accordingly is what will get us out of this ludicrous mess. I feel as if I have arrived, which is why I am writing this... now.

I could always sense what was wrong when I heard the latest and greatest information because it was complicated and the documents involved were egregiously long and legal. I always said, "If it isn't simple, it isn't accurate. If most people cannot grasp the concept, then it isn't accurate. If it involves knowing the policies of the Psychopathocracy, then it isn't accurate." Consequently, I knew that I would know the truth when it showed up because it would be simple – something that we could all see and grasp (if we truly remembered who we are) and it would have nothing to do with any corporate policy manual.

So, whilst reading Braden's book, the penny dropped... I remembered who I am. I clearly saw all I need to know about how to handle the public. There is a Trust, evidenced by the NAME; my parents were the Grantors of the value, the Province of Ontario registered it, so it is the Owner and Trustee, all public servants are Agents for the Trustee, and, the Trust/NAME itself is the Beneficiary-in-fact. The entire game of Commerce is played for the beneficiaries. Needless to say, the public isn't about to create a game which doesn't benefit them, so, 'beneficiaries' includes them. My parents granted the original value to the NAME/Trust, via their signatures, and, over the years, I gave it value, via my labor. I cannot be involved in commerce so I use the NAME/Trust in order for me to function in a society which is based upon commerce. Think 'Monopoly®™' We require a token to play, and the only money is that within the game. There is no 'money' outside the game.

I guess it is human nature to try to get out of doing one's job, yet, since I stand to lose, it would behoove me to ensure that the servants serve not only themselves but also me. I hold all public Trust corporations in trust, and, if an agent becomes 'un-trust-worthy', e.g.: if he neglects his fiduciary duty and pretends that I am the Trustee – the one responsible for settling and adjusting the Trust's accounts – then, I am obliged to remind him of his oath of office, wherein he has sworn 'to serve and protect' me and my rights. It is the trust owner, trustee, and agents who have a job to do – not I. Since their debts are their business, not mine, and, since the one who creates the liability must provide the remedy, they are the ones required to settle all charges against the Trust. If they refuse, then they are in violation of public policy and the criminal code and I would be obliged to lay claim against them for Breach of the public Trust and Breach of Oath of Office.

Will we soon lay claims against doctors for Breach of their Hippocratic Oath wherein they swear: "I will... never do harm to anyone"? Taking down some of the medical mafia might move 'medicine' out of its present position of the #1 cause of death on this continent.

Maybe we ought just to say that we do not choose to be recognized through the Name and, unless they can prove that we are required to be or that we are a Trust or a Name, why are they trying to get us to pay a debt that belongs to the public, particularly when we cannot 'pay'? There is no money, and we are not even permitted to play the game, let alone incur debt. The charge is against the Trust; who is the Trustee? We are not, so, who is the one required to settle the account? They have the wrong party. We wish we could settle it for them yet we do not have access to the account; we cannot take from it; we can only give value to it. Haven't we done that, already? How could they have set up, for example, a credit card, if we didn't give them the value up front? Now that they have created debt for that account, aren't they the ones liable for the remedy, for setting off the debt, for balancing the account? This has nothing to do with us.

Whoever created the debt is the one responsible for settling it, yet, they will do everything to try to make us liable. But why would any of us willingly go to court? A place where we were not invited, where we have no standing, where our chances of prevailing are almost nil, where we are not being compensated for our time or effort for a charge which has nothing to do with us, and for which the agent for the Trustee is not only already in the court but also the one legally obliged to settle the account for the Trust/Name? I heard that one judge, upon hearing a fellow lament that he is not the Name, ask, "Well, if you're not the Name, why are you here?"

Why have we been doing the servants' work for them? Because they tricked us into believing that we are responsible for balancing the books of the Trust (the name of which we have continuously been told is our 'name' and is not), for which we are NOT Trustee, and we forgot to question this, all because... we had yet to remember who we are.

The Solution: Nothing We Could Ever Have 'Found' – We Had to 'Arrive'.

The only thing in existence in the universe is energy. Knowing how to make that work for us is all we need to know. The only way we can make energy work for us is to know who we are.

Studying rules to a game which appears to be made up and controlled by 'them' is a waste of time. There are only a few things we need to know about 'them'. Our experience of them exists for the same reason that our experience of anything exists – because we created it. We created 'them' and our experiences with them, in order to discover who we are. Our experiences of 'them' are solely for the purpose of our spiritual evolution, which happens to entail challenging ourselves to discover the truth about our power. This is all an illusion and we are simply here to observe our conduct which will reveal the degree to which we realize our all-powerful nature. The reason we cannot win by finding a solution within their rules is because that would ruin the game. We have forgotten that it is OUR game. Our only rule is: we can't win until we remember who we are. It's a Catch 22. We can't win because we don't know who we are but as soon as we remember, the game ceases to exist. Therein lies the win because the game was designed for us to discover ourselves and, when we do, its over.

We created antagonists solely for the drama since 'they' appear to be sub-plots to the main plot which is the drama of observing ourselves. I've noticed that many emails I receive report some form of theft of our basic rights. The most righteous of the writers complain of the new 'laws' which restrict our choices of healthcare. Did it ever cross their minds that this might be good news? If we can't have these 'health products', I guess we'll have to realize who we are, learn that there is nothing outside ourselves, and go about healing ourselves. Whenever I hear about this sort of thing, I always take a look at it from another perspective. When I worked at Banff hospital, someone complained that "The Province is no longer going to pay for ....." (some procedure). Nurses were angry. I told them that this is good news because this is pushing people to take responsibility for their own health. Medicine or Naturopathy or whatever... they are all external and no matter what 'the Province' does or no longer will do, they are forcing us to get it through our skulls that we can create perfect health all by ourselves. We do not need anything or anyone for the things in life which we have been programmed to believe that we can obtain only from the 'professionals' – teachers, doctors (allopathic or otherwise), ministers, lawyers, etc. Haven't we learned, yet, that none of them is as good as our own intuition, which is our connection to Spirit? Those who send out this sort of news do not know who they are and, maybe, are as threatening to our realization of our personal power as any other well-programmed bureaucrat. The mere fact that some have made distinctions between allopathy and naturopathy tells me that they do not see the distinction between looking within and looking without.

Putting our time, attention, energy, and emotion into trying to correct something which 'appears' to be outside ourselves is what David Icke calls 'combing the mirror'. If we look into the mirror and can only anticipate a 'bad hair day', combing the mirror will not get us out the door any sooner. The only way to change anything that is going on in the mirror is to change the source of the reflection. We are that source.

Knowing who we are is the only thing that will allow us to change how we conduct ourselves which is the only thing that will alter the reflection. Responding to a situation any time but in the here and now will not work. This means that we cannot pre-empt the future and we cannot correct the past. Neither exists. The only thing we can do is respond in the moment. Intending to un-do what we have done in the past, or write documents to stave off potential difficult situations in the future, will only demonstrate to those whom we use for the purpose of discovering where we measure, on our enlightenment scale, that we have not become acquainted with our own unlimited power. If we had, we would not be dallying in affairs which have nothing to do with us. Only in the moment can we deal with what is occurring right now. Our point of power is in the now and any conduct which takes us out of now – into either the past or the future – will not serve us.

I always wanted to pave the way for an easier life and the only thing that I experienced was constant preparedness; I forgot to live in the here and now and, noticing that I have lived nearly six decades, I realize that much of that time has been spent either trying to un-do, balance, make up for my mistakes or prepare for the next situation so that I wouldn't make any more mistakes. I hated getting 'life' wrong because my ego's drug of choice, to cause me to feel 'wrong', was 'regret'.

In case you haven't noticed, our society does not allow for mistakes. We are either threatened not to err or punished if we do. Since the best way to learn is to fail, it behooves us to 'fail fast'. Only then, can we be open to success.

Success is going from failure to failure without any loss of enthusiasm. – Winston Churchill.

Yet, we all live in fear. We actually are not permitted to experience the most efficient way to learn, without severe emotional, not to mention physical, mental, and spiritual repercussions. Our society is designed to keep us from venturing out, experimenting, throwing caution to the wind, because we are kept in fear of making mistakes. Society discourages us from 'living'. We are punished if we don't either make amends or correct our ways. The entire court system, which came from the ego mind, is based upon this.

All the 'attorney wannabes' are studying the rules of a game they cannot win because, if they could actually win, they would no longer need or want to play it. After I jumped out of an aeroplane, I didn't need to do it again. If you know you can do a thing, you don't need to do it, yet we all must do that which we think we cannot do. It seems as if what we all think we cannot do is to state, on the spot, whatever is necessary to empower ourselves to prevail, in the here and now. I always said, "I'm better on paper." What does this tell you? That I didn't trust myself to conduct myself, in the moment, in a manner which demonstrates that I know who I am and that I am capable of demonstrating the love and power that I know I am.

So, people are still digging in the same pit, year after year, with only slight tributaries, instead of surfacing to look around to see that the solution is in the here and now and can be only in the here and now.

Their intent, as mine, was to set up a situation so that we could not fail. This is an impossibility because, since each of us is the creator of our own circumstances, there could never be a 'one-size fits all'. Where one might prevail, by saying the right thing in order to get out of a tight spot, the same words coming from the mouth of another might land him in jail. Therein lies the solution which is the miracle. If we simply BE who we are and act in the moment, we'll create whatever we create, yet, all the while knowing that the circumstance that we create is precisely for our own information which is: to observe where we are on the 'I know I am all love and all powerful' scale.

It seems we have come full cycle. We began by saying, "That's not my name." A dozen years ago, that landed me in jail, but that is only because, although I was acutely aware of what I was not, I had only a flicker of an idea of who I was. My friend once said of me, "Mary may not know what she wants, but she sure knows what she doesn't want!" Well, knowing what I didn't want didn't assist me in knowing what I want or even knowing where to look. It has been a long road, yet I have learned a couple of things. Observing something we resist will only empower it because 'resistance' is an extremely powerful energy and we will find ourselves at the effect of it. We cannot argue with quantum physics/mechanics. This is why those who are sending fear-filled emails will experience precisely what they believe; however, those of us who chuck them into the trash will not. Nothing exists without my observation – so, if I put my attention elsewhere, those things cease to exist... in my universe. If you continue to observe them, they will continue to exist in your universe.

So, does 'apocalypse' mean 'horror show' or 'unveiling'? It means 'unveiling' or 'revelation' to me, so this is what I will get. In my observation, I will be able to know the entire truth of this universe. If you believe the word means 'hell and damnation', end of the world, natural disasters, you will experience precisely that... your option.

When you change the way you look at things, the things you look at change. - Wayne Dyer

In his book, Fractal Time, Gregg Braden says that what 2012 will be depends upon how we choose to respond to all that occurs. We play a role in the creation of the shift of World Ages and nothing will be 'happening to' us. If we choose to respond with love, strength, and balance, the next World Age will be one of peace. I suspect that even if you choose from fear and you opt for greed, comfort, and profit, those of us who want the new World Age to be one of love and peace, will, with the strength of love energy, override your desire, so, if you can't beat us – and you can't – then consider joining us. In other words, it will take only a few of us to create what we want. You who want disaster cannot prevail.

We won't ever know what works until we try, but there is nothing to try. There is no paper which will circumvent what we are avoiding because the minute we file it, they (whom we created to do so) suddenly know that we don't know who we are and they ignore the paper because why would they honor any paper we write when the very writing of it evidences that we don't know who we are? Has anyone ever received any worthwhile answers to questions we post to them? I think that it is alright that we know how they operate, as long as we do not let them know that we know.

Have more than thou showest; speak less than thou knowest. – William Shakespeare.

In other words, never fire their laws back to them because that appears as if we think they matter. We make the illusion real. I think if we write anything, the less legal-land crap we include, the more effective it will be. All we have to let them know, right here, right now, in the moment, is, "I don't know your business but I do know it isn't mine."

If we were courageous, had no fear, knowing that all of life is our creation of circumstances to measure our fear, we would jump in and deal with the alleged consequences. The only way to be in control is to be willing to be out of control; if we are willing to die, we cannot die. If we had no fear, we could be who we are.

Whatever occurred, we could simply include, just because we would know that we can never die and it would all be just part of the movie. Who lives like that?

The movie, Man On Wire, proves that Philippe Petit lives like that. This is the man who walked on a wire between the Twin Towers of the World Trade Center in 1974. When he walks a wire in a place that the local constabulary considers 'illegal', he gets arrested. He's been arrested over 500 times in his career. (This causes me to wonder what I have been doing with my time.) He does not see these arrests as something that ought not to be. His arrests are just the finale to his theatricals. He tells us that we must 'exercise rebellion'. He handles every situation in the 'now'.

When we are forced to handle a situation, we must handle it in the here and now. If the situation is on paper, we must handle the situation as close to 'now' as possible, which ought to be considered as 72 hours because the ones to whom we are responding will consider that 'now' (they are fictions... what do they know about 'now'?) In other words, our tactics change with each situation. At the moment the Name is 'charged', I think we ought to let them know that we do not consent to being recognized through the Name. I can provide the Statement of Birth as proof that the Name belongs to the province and a declaration that I have nothing to do with it. My signature is not on it. This is their business, not mine.

However, in a case where the public already has our cash, we must conduct ourselves properly in the moment. This means that we tell them, as soon as possible, that the fruits of our labor have ended up in the public as a tax, which is in violation of public policy and so we ought to file for a tax return (return of the tax). Since it is ALL tax, we can go to our receipts. I would just put it all into a cover letter, put the NAME and the amount to be refunded on a 'tax return' form, sign it, and beg their pardon if I haven't done this properly and, if they please, tell me what I can do to correct it – which forms to use, etc. Again, this is their business, not mine. I don't mind assisting them, but I ought not to be expected to do it alone.

"Whoever creates the liability must provide the remedy." We have all heard it and seem to have forgotten it. So, whoever charges, creates the debt, or sends the bill is responsible for discharging, settling the debt, and balancing the books. Since all debt is created on paper, all debt can be discharged with... other pieces of paper. This has nothing to do with me since it is impossible for me to create any liability because I do not, will not, and cannot operate in commerce. Since those in the public must know this, I think a gentle reminder is all that is required.

Again, since we live in the 'now', in fact, must live in the 'now', we cannot pre-empt today for the future and we cannot explain tomorrow for the past. Our point of power is now, in the moment. There is no other time and living in the past or future is only disempowering. Do not handle anything which does not require 'handling' RIGHT NOW. Remember Occam's Razor: eliminate non-essentials. The procrastinator's oath is, "Never put off until tomorrow what can be done, today". However, that suggests that one is living for a 'to-do list' and not living in the now and doing whatever shows up next in life, which is all we are ever required to do. I admit, living life by the motto, "Be Here Now" is a facer. The ego mind so loathes it.

I often imagine this scene: Someone... cop... anyone... asks for ID. If we produce 'identification', we admit to being the Name and, immediately, we become the liable party because, then, they know that we do not know who we are. THAT is what makes us liable – our not knowing who we are – nothing else. "Do you have ID?" ID!? "Identification." Of what? "You!" Well, you're looking at me. "We need to see something that identifies you." Well, nothing is identical to me so what is it you really want? "Who are you?" Who are you? "We need to know who you are." I am who I say I am. "Who do you say you are?" I am you, and if you don't know that, then you don't know who you are, so why would I discuss anything with someone who doesn't know who he is?

You can see where this might escalate... If you have any ID with you, which I do not recommend, it might be a good idea to carry the Statement of Birth – the document your parents signed, along with a Declaration stating that you do not consent to be recognized through the name on the document plus, maybe, an addendum, generic to any agent who might need to know. It is our responsibility to remember who we are. The instant that we do, all this will come to a screeching halt. The disappearance of the universe is contingent upon our remembering.
